Fort Pillow Captured After a Desperate Fight.

Four Hundred of the Garrison Brutally Murdered.

Wounded and Unarmed Men Bayoneted and Their Bodies Burned.

White and Black Indiscriminately Butchered.

Devilish Atrocities of the Insatiate Fiends.

FROM CAIRO.

CAIRO, Thursday, April 14.

On Tuesday morning the rebel Gen. FORREST attacked Fort Pillow. Soon after the attack FORREST sent a flag of truce demanding the surrender of the fort and garrison, meanwhile disposing of his force so as to gain the advantage. Our forces were under command of Major BOOTH, of the Thirteenth Tennessee (U. S.) Heavy Artillery, formerly of the First Alabama Cavalry.

The flag of truce was refused, and fighting resumed. Afterward a second flag came in, which was also refused.

Both flags gave the rebels advantage of gaining new positions.

The battle was kept up until 9 P. M., when Major BOOTH was killed, and Major BRADFORD took command.

The rebels now came in swarms over our troops, compelling them to surrender.

Immediately upon the surrender ensued a scene which utterly baffles description. Up to that time, comparatively few of our men had been killed; but, Insatiate as fiends, bloodthirsty as devils incarnate, the Confederates commenced an indiscriminate butchery of the whites and blacks, including those of both colors who had been previously wounded.

The black soldiers, becoming demoralized, rushed to the rear, the white officers having thrown down their arms.

Both white and black were bayoneted, shot or sabred; even dead bodies were horribly mutilated, and children of seven and eight years and several negro women killed in cold blood. Soldiers unable to speak from wounds were shot dead, and their bodies rolled down the banks into the river. The dead and wounded negroes were piled in heaps and burned, and several citizens who had joined our forces for protection were killed or wounded.

Out of the garrison of six hundred, only two hundred remained alive.

Among our dead officers are Capt. BRADFORD, Lieuts. BANE, ANDERSON, WRIGHT, RAVEN, and Major BOOTH, all of the Thirteenth Tennessee Cavalry.

Capt. PEGRAM and Lieut. LYON, Thirteenth Tennessee Cavalry, and Capt. YOUNG, Twenty-fourth Missouri, Acting-Provost-Marshal, were taken prisoners.

Maj. BRADFORD was also captured, but is said to have escaped; it is feared, however, that he has been killed.

The steamer Platte Valley came up at about half-past 3 o'clock, and was hailed by the rebels under a flag of truce. Men were sent ashore to bury the dead, and take aboard such of the wounded as the enemy had allowed to live. Fifty-seven were taken aboard, including seven or eight colored. Eight died on the way up. The steamer arrived here this evening, and was immediately sent to the Mound City Hospital, to discharge her suffering cargo.

Among our wounded officers of colored troops are Capt. POMEROY, Lieut. LIBERMAN and Adjt. LEMMING.

Six guns were captured by the rebels, and carried off, including two ten-pound Parrotts and two twelve-pound howitzers. A large amount of stores was destroyed or carried away.

The intention of the rebels seemed to be to evacuate the place, and move on toward Memphis.

LATER.

CAIRO, Thursday, April 15.

Two negro soldiers, wounded at Fort Pillow, were buried by the rebels, but afterward worked themselves out of their graves. They were among those brought up in the Platte Valley, and are now in hospital at Mound City.

The officers of the Platte Valley receive great credit from the military authorities for landing at Fort Pillow, at eminent risk, and taking our wounded on board, and for their kind attentions on the way up.

REPORTS FROM ST. LOUIS.

ST. LOUIS, Friday, April 15.

The correspondent of the Union, who was on board the steamer Platte Valley at Fort Pillow, gives even a more appalling description of the fiendishness of the rebels than our Cairo dispatches.

Many of our wounded were shot in the hospital. The remainder were driven out, and the hospital was burned.

On the morning after the battle the rebels went over the field, and shot the negroes who had not died from their wounds.

Several of the guns captured by FORREST at Fort Pillow were spiked before falling into his hands. Others were turned upon gunboat No. 7, which, having fired some 200 rounds and exhausted her ammunition, was compelled to withdraw. Although a target, she received but slight injury.

Gen. LEE arrived and assumed the command at the beginning of the battle. Previous to which Gen. CHALMERS directed the movements. FORREST, with the main force, retired after the fight to Brownsville, taking with him the captured funds.

While the steamer Platte Valley lay under flag of truce, taking on board our wounded, some of the rebel officers, and among them Gen. CHALMERS, went on board, and some of our officers showed them great deference, drinking with them, and showing them other marks of courtesy.

Many of those who had escaped from the works and hospital, who desired to be treated as prisoners of war, as the rebels said, were ordered to fall into line, and when they had formed, were inhumanly shot down.

Of 300 colored troops not more than 50 escaped the massacre, and not one officer that commanded them survives. Only four officers of the Thirteenth Tennessee escaped death.

The loss of the Thirteenth Tennessee is 600 killed. The remainder were wounded and captured.

Gen. CHALMERS told this correspondent that, although it was against the policy of his Government to spare negro soldiers or their officers, he had done all in his power to stop the carnage. At the same time he believed it was right.

Another officer said our white losses would have been protected had they not been found on duty with negroes.

While the rebels endeavored to conceal their loss, it was evident that they suffered severely. Col. REAN, commanding a Tennessee regiment, was mortally wounded. There were two or three well filled hospitals at a short distance in the country.

FROM LOUISVILLE.

LOUISVILLE, Thursday, April 14.

Col. PRATT, commanding at Paducah, telegraphs that he is informed that Paducah has been attacked, and the town is full of rebels.

FURTHER FROM PADUCAH.

CAIRO, Friday, April 15.

No boats have been allowed to leave here for points below Columbus since the first news of the Fort Pillow affair.

The attack on Paducah yesterday proved to be a mere raid for plunder, made by a couple of hundred men, who were shelled out by the fort and gunboats after occupying a position of the city in squads.

About noon they left, taking away a number of horses and considerable plunder, and leaving behind about six of their wounded. No one was hurt on our side.

THE WAR IN ARKANSAS.

News from Gen. Steele to April 7—The Rebels Twice Defeated—A Junction to be Made with the Forces from Fort Smith.

LITTLE ROCK, Thursday, April 14.

Advices from Gen. STEELE to the 7th inst. are received.

His expedition had then reached a point five miles south of Elkin's Ferry, on the Little Missouri River, and about 25 miles from Camden, where he expected Gen. THAYER, with the force from Fort Smith to join him the next day.

On the 2d the rebel Gen. SHELBY attacked Gen STEELE's rear guard, under Gen. ROSS, with 1,500 cavalry and two pieces of artillery, and was repulsed, with the loss of 100 killed and wounded. Our loss was 44 killed and wounded and 15 prisoners.

On the 4th, the rebel Gen. MARMADUKE attacked Gen. STEELE with 3,000 or 4,000 cavalry and five pieces of artillery, on the south side of the Little Missouri River, and after five hours' fighting, was repulsed, with the loss of four killed and twenty-three wounded. Our loss was twenty-three wounded.

There is a large force of rebels five or six miles in advance, but it is not expected they will make a stand.

Nothing had been heard by Gen. STEELE of Gen. BANKS or the gunboats on Red River.

FROM ALBANY.

The Bank Question—A Spicy Discussion—The Senate Refuses to Print the Majority Report—Passage of the Chenango Canal Extension Bill.

Correspondence of the New-York Times:

ALBANY, Friday, April 15, 1864.

The bank question has again been sharply debated in the Assembly to-day. Four thousand copies of the minority report were ordered printed, and upon this Mr. ARDEES desired to call up the majority report. The House permitted him to do so, and he proceeded to read a carefully prepared and temperate speech, setting forth the reasons which governed the majority of the committee in making their report. His remarks were complimented by members who did not agree with his views, as in contrast with the style of the report which he supported. Several members replied, assailing the majority report as disloyal, and the debate became animated and exciting. The principles and language of the report were severely criticised, and denounced in unmeasured terms by prominent members. At the conclusion of the debate, a resolution which provided that no more than the usual number of copies of the majority report should be printed was lost by a decided negative vote. The Speaker ruled that a refusal to adopt this resolution was equivalent to declining to print any copies of the report, and members voted upon the resolution with this understanding.

The Assembly adjourned at an earlier hour than usual to-day in order to grant the use of the Assembly Chamber to a delegation of gentlemen from New-York, who desired to be heard in regard to taxation in that City. Judge J. W. EDMONDS is addressing the Committees on Affairs of Cities and many members of the Legislature beside upon this subject.

The bill providing for the extension of the Chenango Canal passed the Senate this morning by a vote of 21 to 9.

The Printing Committee reported against printing extra copies of the majority report of the Bank Committee against the act enabling the State banks to form under the National Banking Act.

The committee say that the report of the Bank Committee is characterized by semi-disloyal language towards the General Government, and especially towards the Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. CHASE.

The report continues: "That at this peculiar crisis the Government needs the support of every loyal citizen, and he that criticises the acts of the Government in language not favorable to the Government, which in times of peace might be justifiable in a party view, becomes a criminal."

The committee add that they think the majority report of the Bank Committee is subject to the charge of "disloyalty."

The committee then conclude by recommending the printing of 4,000 extra copies of the minority report of the Bank Committee.

The previous question was ordered on agreeing to the report of the Printing Committee, and it was agreed to by yeas 65, nays 32.

The question was then taken as stated by the Speaker, "whether any copies of the majority report of the Bank Committee should be printed."

PROCEEDINGS OF CONGRESS.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Friday, April 15.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA MATTERS.

Mr. HOWARD, of Michigan, (Union,) introduced a bill to amend the statutes in force in the District of Columbia; repealing the saving clause in favor of pension beyond lives in the old Maryland laws; for the limitation of certain actions for avoiding suits at law; the administration of justice in testamentary affairs, &c.

TAX ON THE MANUFACTURE OF AGRICULTURAL IMPLEMENTS.

Mr. DOOLITTLE, of Wisconsin, (Union,) presented the memorial of the Legislature of Wisconsin, asking that a tax be placed only upon profits of money invested in the manufacture of agricultural implements, instead of three per cent. on all sales. It represents that these manufactures are five times the value of the capital invested, equal to fifteen per cent. on the capital; that they have greatly benefitted the West, and without them the development of agricultural resources would be retarded. The memorial was referred to the Committee on Finance.

THE GOLD SPECULATION BILL.

Mr. SHERMAN, of Ohio, (Union,) called up the bill prohibiting speculative transactions in gold, &c., as published in yesterday's proceedings. He said the object of the bill was to prevent gambling in gold. The committee thought that at this time it had an injurious effect, and that the sale of gold by a party who had no gold to sell was an offence, was being daily committed by parties when they had not a cent to sell. He presented the following letter from the Secretary of the Treasury on the subject. In a letter to Mr. FESSENDEN, Chairman of the Finance Committee, under date of the Treasury Department, April 12, 1864, the Secretary of the Treasury says: "Sir, notwithstanding the diminished amount of United States notes in circulation, and our gradual withdrawal from use as currency of interest bearing United States notes made a legal tender for their face, the price of gold continues to advance. This effect can only be attributed to one or two causes, and is probably due in part to each. First, the increase of the notes of local banks, and secondly, the efforts of speculators. I have already submitted, through you, to the consideration of the Committee on Finance, a bill intended as a remedy for the first evil. I now beg leave to submit to its consideration a bill intended as a remedy for the second. The first bill, if it passed into law, will, I think, be productive of the most salutary consequences. The effects of the second will probably be more immediate, though, perhaps, not of such permanent importance. I ask for both a candid consideration, and, if approved, the favorable action of Congress. It must not be thought, however, that I regard either or both of these measures adequate remedies for financial disorder. Nothing short of taxation of one-half of the amount of our current expenditures and a reduction of these expenditures to the lowest point compatible with efficiency, will insure financial success to the Government, and without military success, all measures will fail.

Very respectfully yours, S. P. CHASE.

Mr. SHERMAN said that although the Committee on Finance were not certain that the evils sought to be remedied by this bill would be; so he was certain, however, that the bill might do good, and could do no harm. The true remedy for our evils, as all knew, was the success of our armies.

Mr. FESSENDEN, of Maine, (Union,) advocated the bill, and said it might tend to cure an evil which existed because of the desire of some persons to make money at any expense to the country; and again, as he was sorry to say, because there were many among us who cultivated a hostility to the currency because they sympathized with our enemy. In a great commercial city like New-York it was impossible to repress this entirely, but he thought the bill would accomplish good.

Mr. COWAN, of Pennsylvania, (Union,) opposed the bill as useless and doubtful legislation. He did not believe our currency had so depreciated as to require such a means to bolster it up. He denied that these speculations had the least effect on the price of gold. The price of gold depended upon its intrinsic material value, and, if there was an article in the world which had a regal right to be called king, it was gold. He quoted at length from THIERS' History of the French Revolution, giving a history of the assignats issued at that time, and drew a parallel between that era and this.

Mr. COWAN moved to strike out the clause requiring the annual delivery of United States notes or national currency in all gold transactions. He said the bill will have no better effect than the Gold Bill passed recently, when gold went up five per cent. the day after its passage. He opposed the bill as useless and impracticable.

His amendment was rejected—as follows:

YEAS—Messrs. Buckalew, Clark, Collamer, Harding, Hendricks, Howe, Johnson, Nesmith, Powell, Saulsbury and Wright—14.

NAYS—Messrs. Anthony, Brown, Chandler, Cowan, Dixon, Doolittle, Fessenden, Foster, Hale, Harris, Lane of Indiana, Lane of Kansas, Morgan, Morrill, Pomeroy, Ramsey, Sherman, Sprague, Sumner, Van Buren, Trumbull, Van Winkle, Wade, Willey and Wilson—28.

Mr. CHANDLER, of Michigan, (Union,) supported the bill. It was well known that there were in many of our large cities persons of disloyal opinions, who used all kinds of methods to break down the confidence in the Government and its currency. In New-York City, to-day, JEFF. DAVIS would get a larger vote than a loyal man. These gold gamblers were nearly all sympathizers with the rebellion. He believed the people had confidence in our securities, as for every dollar the Government issued there was a mortgage on the solid wealth of the country. One reason of the great demand for gold was the extravagance of the people. There was what was called the "Gold Ring" in New-York, who were sympathizers with the rebellion, and this bill would have an effect on them and upon similar combinations. When our armies should march to victory, the speculators would be the ones to suffer.

Mr. JOHNSON, of Maryland, (Union,) made a legal argument to show that it was not competent for Congress to undertake to regulate this matter, as it was a matter solely belonging to the States. If, as alleged, it was a crime to gamble in gold, it was to be punished by the laws of the States. He denied our authority to regulate State Banks under the Constitution. Gold had become an article of trade and contract, and as such the laws of the States should regulate it. This bill further proposed to regulate foreign exchange. If we had power in Congress to do this, why not extend it to bonds, stocks, promissory notes, &c., and thus regulate the entire business of the State. The bill would not be a success permanently, because these speculators, instead of having their places in the street, would continue under one roof and exert the same influence they now did. We wanted additional taxation and a vigorous and successful prosecution of the war. With this the people would allow the debts to be trebled.

THE DISAGREEMENT ON MONTANA.

A message was received from the House, announcing their non-concurrence in the report of the Committee of Conference on the disagreeing vote on the bill creating a Territorial Government for Montana, and stating that they had appointed a new committee, with instructions asking the appointment of a similar one by the Senate.

Mr. FESSENDEN and others, while expressing a willingness to recede, condemned the manner in which the House made the request. He was tired of seeing the Senate continually getting on its knees to the House.

On the motion of Mr. COLLAMER, of Vermont, (Union,) the Senate refused to accept the proposition of the House, coming in the form it had.

THE GOLD BILL AGAIN.

A motion by Mr. COLLAMER to strike out the second section, forbidding the purchase or sale of gold at other than the ordinary place of business of the seller or purchaser, was rejected. Adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Friday, April 15.

NIGHT SESSIONS.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa, (Union,) again asked, but failed to obtain, consent to offer a resolution providing for night sessions for the transaction of business.

INVALID PENSIONS.

Mr. WHALEY, of West Virginia, (Union,) from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported a bill, which was passed, supplementary to the law of 1862.

THE DISAGREEMENT ON MONTANA.

Mr. BEAMAN, of Massachusetts, (Union,) from the Conference Committee on the disagreeing amendment to the bill providing a temporary government for the Territory of Montana, made a report recommending a concurrence in the Senate amendment, striking out the qualification of "white" voters, and substituting "every male citizen of the United States and those who have declared their intention to become such."

Mr. BEAMAN said that he would not, at this time, make any remarks. He believed that the subject was well understood by every gentleman, and therefore moved the "previous question."

Mr. HOLMAN, of Indiana, (Dem.,) moved to lay the report on the table.

Motion to lay on the table lost, by yeas, 66; nays, 67.

The House then disagreed to the report by a vote of 53 against 52.

Mr. HOLMAN moved that the House "adhere" to its amendment.

Mr. BEAMAN moved that the House "insist," and ask another Committee of Conference.

Mr. WRIGHT, of Maryland, (Union,) moved the following instructions: "And that the Committee of Conference agree to no report which authorizes to vote any other than "free white male citizens, and those who have declared their intentions to become such."

The question was taken on the instructions of Mr. WRIGHT, and they were agreed to by yeas, 75; nays, 67.

Mr. BEAMAN's motion for another Committee of Conference was then adopted, with the instructions as above.

THE UNEMPLOYED GENERALS.

The joint resolution to dispose of the unemployed Generals was postponed for ten days.

OCEAN STEAM MAIL SERVICE TO BRAZIL.

Mr. ALLEY, of Massachusetts, (Union,) from the Committee on the Post-office and Post Roads, reported a bill authorizing the establishment of ocean mail steamship service between the United States and Brazil.

Mr. ALLEY showed the importance of the measure.

Mr. PRUYN, of New-York, (Dem.,) expressed the hope that this would receive the unanimous support of the House, as it would show that we were well disposed to cultivate the good feeling of Brazil toward us, and further increase the benefits of commercial communication between the two countries.

Mr. STEVENS, of Pennsylvania, (Union,) thought they had abandoned the system of subsidies. We tried it with the Collins line and abandoned it, leaving everything open to competition, as it should be. If it were ever profitable it seemed to him that we should not resort to it at this time when gold was at a premium, ranging from 50 100 per cent., and when the public expenses were three millions of dollars a day.

Mr. ALLEY said the gentleman misapprehended the bill. It proposed to give for the service not exceeding $150,000 per annum, provided Brazil would pay an equal amount. There was no subsidy. He particular lines were selected; but the service was open for fair competition.

Mr. KASSON, of Iowa, (Union,) remarked that the bill did not merely provide for cultivating postal and commercial communications with Brazil, but with intermediate points, and he briefly showed the advantages of the bill.

Afterward, further proceedings took place, when Mr. STEVENS moved that the bill be laid upon the table.

This was disagreed to—80 against 37.

The bill was then passed.

The bill authorizes the Postmaster-General to unite with the Post-office Department of Brazil in establishing mail communication between the two contributing mail steamships, of not less than 2,000 tons each, of sufficient number to perform twelve round trips per annum between a United States port north of the Potomac River and Rio Janeiro, touching at St. Thomas, in the West Indies, and at Bahia and Pernambuco, provided that the expense to the United States shall not exceed $300,000 per annum.

The Postmaster-General is authorized to advertise for proposals for such service sixty days in one or more newspapers in Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia, New-York and Boston, such contract to go into effect on or before Sept. 1, 1865.

RAILROADS MUST CARRY THE MAILS.

Mr. ALLEY, from the Postal Committee, reported a bill compelling all railroad corporations to carry the mails for such compensation as may be provided by law.

The bill was passed.

THE POSTAL MONEY-ORDER SYSTEM.

Mr. ALLEY called up the bill to establish a postal money order system, and it was passed.

This bill specifies that no order is to be issued for less than one dollar, or more than thirty.

MR. DOMOUSE WANTED.

Mr. ROLLINS, of Missouri, (Union,) from the Committee on Public Expenditures, reported a resolution authorizing the Speaker to issue his warrant to the Sergeant-at-Arms for the arrest of JOHN H. DOUCHUS, of New-York, who has refused to appear and testify in relation to the affairs of the New-York Custom-house.

The resolution was passed.

RELIEF OF POSTMASTERS WHO HAVE BEEN ROBBED BY GUERRILLAS.

The House passed a resolution for the relief of Postmasters who have been robbed of stamps, money, &c., by the rebel forces or bands of guerrillas.

The House adjourned at 4:20 o'clock.

DEPARTMENT OF THE GULF.

Arrival of the Continental and George Washington from New-Orleans.

ALL QUIET AT ALEXANDRIA.

Gen. Banks Moving Up the Red River.

Our Land and Naval Forces Still Advancing.

AFFAIRS IN TEXAS.

THE CONSTITUTION CONVENTION IN SESSION.

THE "IRON-CLAD" TEST OATH OF LOYALTY.

The steamer Continental, from New-Orleans on the 8th instant, arrived at this port yesterday morning. The George Washington, with New-Orleans dates to the 9th, also arrived yesterday. We are under obligations to Purser ALLEN for the prompt delivery of our files. The news is of only ordinary interest. Alexandria dates of the 8th instant report that Gen. BANKS and staff proceeded up the river and were reported to be at the Grand Ecore. All was quiet at Alexandria, and ample precautions taken against surprise by the enemy.

For the present Grand Ecore will be the headquarters of Gen. BANKS. The Black Hawk, on returning to Alexandria, when about twenty-five miles below Grand Ecore, was fired at by a party of about thirty guerillas, wounding Maj. E. GUYSON, Paymaster United States army, the engineer, and a negress. Neither of the three was seriously injured, although Maj. GUYSON had a narrow escape. He was struck in the arm by a bucktail, and a minie ball passed through and cut off some of his whiskers. The Black Hawk sustained but trifling injuries. Red River had fallen six feet at Alexandria, and was still receding. The heavy iron-clads had dropped down to Fort de Russy. There was still sufficient water for the gunboats and transports to cross the falls. The streets of Alexandria were barricaded in case of raids by the rebels. Some five hundred of the people have taken the oath under the President's Amnesty Proclamation. A Union meeting was held on the 6th inst.

The steamer Luminary, before reported destroyed, was above the Falls, uninjured.

The reports of a rebel attack on Alexandria are untrue.

OUR NEW-ORLEANS CORRESPONDENCE.

The News from Gen. Banks—The Union Feeling in the Red River Region—History of the Parish—Tableaux Vivants—Cotton from the Red River.

NEW-ORLEANS, Saturday, April 9, 1864.

The news from Gen. BANKS is cheering, and everything is progressing finely, so far as the movements of the army are concerned. His command is above Natchitoches, and up to this time there has been no battle between us and the rebel forces, despite rumors and "authentic details" to the contrary notwithstanding. There is constant skirmishing, however, between our advance guard and the rear of DICK TAYLOR's force, and things promise that there may be a collision at Shreveport, for that is the important point, as the gate of Texas into Louisiana. A number of prisoners have been taken, though it would seem as if these people struggled off for the sake of being captured. This idea is confirmed by the fact that Capt. TODD, an own cousin of Mr. LINCOLN, surrendered himself and expressed his willingness to take the oath of allegiance, and said he was sick of the war.

The most significant thing in this connection is the uprising of the Union people in Rapide Parish, the court-house town of which is Alexandria. Rapide is called from its size and immense production the "Empire Parish," and it contained, before the breaking out of the rebellion, the largest cotton farms, and the richest planting population in this part of the country. The people were always distinguished for their intelligence and liberality. The leading citizens were staunch friends of Mr. CLAY, and always conservative in their politics.

It is, therefore, not surprising that the first favorable opportunity that occurred for the people to return to the Union should be taken advantage of. The gentlemen engaged in the movement are all old residents of the parish, not new comers, and are, therefore, more to be admired for their patriotism. Prominent among the gentlemen who took the oath of allegiance were citizens of the highest character, social and political. LEWIS TERRAZAS, Esq., is a lawyer and planter, and has for years been a member of the State Legislature. J. K. HYNES is a distinguished lawyer and a wealthy planter. He is one of the most accomplished gentlemen in the country; was a member of the secession convention and signed the infamous ordinance. Since DICK TAYLOR has had command of the rebel forces in western Louisiana, Mr. HYNES has been much of his time his companion and civil adviser. His abandonment of the renegade son of "Old Zack" has a significance. The cause of the rebels must be bad indeed on

New-England and Western troops brought together here under the command of Gen. BANKS. But in this campaign on Red River they are fighting side by side for the Union, and the blood they are shedding together will add another bond of eternal friendship between the East and the West. These brave men will suffer and triumph in the common cause, and the friendship made when thus engaged in the preservation of our National life, will obliterate all sectional feeling—the narrow views will again estrange them. This is one of the bright spots that illumes the dark horizon of war. I have noticed the growth of this brotherly feeling here and everywhere in the army. Soldiers of the different sections are brought together, and when the war is over, this commingling of men of North, South, East and West in the common struggle, will act as bonds of steel to bind them and their children as a family one and inseparable.

Col. H. B. SCOVILLE, of Gen. BANKS' staff, was severely wounded in a skirmish which took place between Alexandria and Natchitoches; he has reached this city, and is now in the hospital Hotel Dieu. His bravery is spoken of everywhere with the highest commendation. His wound, by a singular coincidence, is very like that received in May last, by Col. John S. CRANE, when with Gen. BANKS, he was making a reconnoissance before Port Hudson. Col. SCOVILLE will be for a long time confined to his bed, but will undoubtedly recover.

The election for delegates for the State Convention passed off with great quietness, for which we are indebted to Capt. Horr, our efficient and popular Mayor, an unpleasant day, and not much effective opposition to the regular free State nominations. The election, in fact, was merely an indorsement of the Gubernatorial election, and completed what was necessary to assist Gov. HAHN in carrying through the principle of prompt emancipation. It would surprise some people at the North to know how deep is the feeling on the last named subject. I know many gentlemen, native Southerners, who have never shown any other than a quiet acceptance of the Federal rule, who are enthusiastic on the subject of making Louisiana a free State, and who will the moment such a thing is constitutionally decreed, become active in exhorting the negroes. It might be expected, there are but few, and relatively few Southern names among the unlucky elected. The rebellion has destroyed most of the magnets of old, and put in their place new and strange people in their places. Still the material of which the convention is composed is of first-rate quality. There are comparatively few professional men—a large number of lawyers there are not in a similar body—but we have what is more acceptable, a mass of working men, a majority of whom have suffered under slave rule, and being now redeemed are determined that they will never again risk their own liberty and that of their children by a possible contact with the institution revived. The people of the North may rest assured that there is a more earnest feeling here than was apparent on the surface; and I anticipate that the convention will carry on its important duties harmoniously and quietly, and that it will adjourn after a comparatively short session, having first given to this State one of the best constitutions the Union is entitled to.

In connection with this subject, it may not be uninteresting to refer, as far as State constitutions are concerned, to the past history of Louisiana. In the year 1845, a convention was called to frame a new constitution. There were elected to the convention, unquestionably the leading men of the State—men entitled to this status either for learning, family influence, or wealth. The richest planters, the most distinguished professional gentlemen, the chieftains of all parts were called to fill the seats of the convention. I remember at the moment the names of JOHN R. GRYMES, J. P. BENJAMIN, MARSHALL, United States Senator S. P. DOWNS, MILES TAYLOR, CHARLES ROSELIUS. There were innumerable judges and lawyers of great distinction, in fact such a learned and distinguished body, as individuals, never before got together. For months these gentlemen debated and wrangled, and at last formulated what they supposed would be a fundamental law; but, alas! when said fundamental law was attempted to be put in force, it was found impracticable. The very framers of it could not tell what it meant, and in 1852 I think another convention was called, either to explain what the already adopted one meant, or make a new one altogether. Now I predict that though the present convention is composed, with few exceptions, of gentlemen heretofore unknown to fame, that still they will give the world a practical instrument—one giving freedom to all men, and strictly republican in its character, and in accordance with the Constitution of the United States.

The convention will be held in the same hall in which, some three years ago, the rebel miscreants in possession, in spite of the real feelings of the people, voted Louisiana out of the Union. By official recognition of Gen. BANKS, the room once LAFAYETTE Hall is now known as "Liberty," and this inspiring designation is over the portal in large gilt letters. The interior is handsomely fitted up with desks for the members, and a handsome rostrum for the President, Secretary, and official reporters. On the right and left of the President's chair are to be some full-length portraits of Gen. WASHINGTON and Gen. JACKSON. Opposite the President, on the face of the gallery, is the full-length portrait of Gen. TAYLOR. The nearest relative WASHINGTON has being in the rebel army of the Potomac; the nearest relative Gen. TAYLOR has living, (his only son DICK,) is commander of the rebel forces opposed to Gen. BANKS in Western Louisiana. Such are the strange and unnatural associations called forth by the sight of these Union Presidents. It is retributive justice that the Free-State Convention should meet in the same hall where met the traitors who betrayed their State to destruction on account of Slavery; but where lives the one who believed this justice would be used up so soon? Persons familiar with Canal-street, New-Orleans, will remember the imposing monument erected at the junction of St. Charles-street, to the memory of HENRY CLAY. On the marble base, by order of Capt. HORR, U. S. N., acting Mayor of the City, has been cut in the solid granite the following inscription, copied from Mr. CLAY's speech, delivered before the American Colonization Society, at Washington, Jan. 20, 1827:

"If I could be instrumental in eradicating this deepest stain Slavery from the character of our country, and removing all blame of reproach on account of it, I would feel a heartfelt proud satisfaction which I should enjoy for the remainder of all the triumphs ever decreed the most successful statesman."

This inscription makes the monument doubly valuable, giving it eloquent tongues in favor of the present Free State movement. I would ask if there is a city in the Northern States where such an inscription would find a place in a public thoroughfare? Yet here it is accepted of with satisfaction, and the full admission that if Mr. CLAY has left any record behind as a statesman, it eminently is what he said and did against Slavery.

FROM TEXAS.

Advices from Texas state that Gen. DANA had been relieved from the command of the troops at Pass Cavallo, and succeeded by Gen. WARREN, Gen. HERRON is sick at Brownsville with the small-pox.

A rebel torpedo was washed ashore at Cedar Bayou, and, being roughly handled by two men of the Second New-York Cavalry, exploded, killing their horses and maiming themselves.

A blockade-runner schooner tried to run out of Pass Cavallo, on the 22 inst. The gunboat Rachelle chased her, and the rebels set fire to her, escaping in boats. The vessel was boarded, and fifty bales of Sea Island cotton saved, and she was then abandoned to the flames.

Major BENEDICTINE was at Pass Cavallo on the 3d inst., with a flag of truce, bringing a number of women and children from Texas and Indianola.

There is no prospect of an immediate movement by our forces, either on the coast or from Brownsville.

The sloop-of-war Pensacola left New Orleans on the 7th inst. for New-York. Gen. DANA had arrived in New-Orleans.

GEN. DANA'S FAREWELL ADDRESS.

HEADQUARTERS FIRST DIVISION, THIRTEENTH ARMY CORPS, MATAGORDA ISLAND, TEXAS, March 31, 1864.

SOLDIERS OF THE FIRST DIVISION: I should do violence to my feelings should I leave my present command without a word of farewell at parting.

Circumstances have seemed to render it advisable that I should seek to be engaged more actively than I can be here at present; and the Major-General commanding the department has been kind enough to relieve me, at my own request.

Officers and men! one and all—with sincerity and with feeling I speak it—my connection with you has been rendered so agreeable and so gratifying by your own excellent qualities, that I feel sad and depressed at the change I have asked for.

Coming from the same section of country with yourselves, I have felt a very great pride in your written history, and I coveted the honor of leading you through the gulf and connecting our name with your past note of renown. Now, with the stench of the many battles you have laid beneath the sod on your victorious fields.

The guns of the Thirteenth Corps will always awaken the liveliest impulses of my heart. I shall listen for their echoes, and, while I may not continue to indulge the hope of rejoining you and sharing your honors and your sufferings, my voice will be joined in the grand chorus of the countless thousands who inherit our boundless prairies, when, with shouts of triumph, they shall hail you returning in the fullness of victory to your peaceful homes.

Wishing you all safely through your dangers,

I am, your friend and comrade,

N. J. T. DANA, Major-General.

FROM PENSACOLA.

Pensacola advices report a fight between Capt. Sumner, Company M, Fourteenth New-York Cavalry, and fifty rebels, under Maj. RANDOLPH, of the Sixth Alabama Cavalry, near that place. After a ten minutes' stand the rebels fled. Their loss was fifteen killed and wounded and eleven prisoners. Our loss was three slightly wounded, including Lieut. VON LOUNSBERG.

Gen. AMORY commands at Pensacola.

The rebels are concentrating in heavy force at Pollard, Ala., to operate on the line of the railroad from Pensacola to Montgomery.

Most terrible persecutions are inflicted on the Southern people in that vicinity who try to evade the conscription. Hundreds of men, women and children are concealed in the swamps, and numbers die of starvation.

Six refugees who attempted to escape in a boat from East Bay, were fired upon by a rebel scouting party, and three killed and two wounded. The uninjured one escaped with his ghastly load.

A terrible storm had raged at Pensacola, but no marine losses were reported. The sloop-of-war Richmond rolled so as to dip her guns under water.

Cotton in New-Orleans was in reduced supply, and prices firm; Middling 72c. Sugar and Molasses dull.

THE FIGHT AT PENSACOLA.

From the New-Orleans Era, April 7.

By the arrival of the steamship Northerner, from Pensacola, we have the following interesting information regarding affairs in that section. It is furnished us by Capt. H. A. SCHAETZ, of the Second Regiment U. S. Artillery:

A brilliant skirmish, and, for the numbers engaged, one of the most desperate of the war, took place a few days since. Capt. SUMNER, of Company M, Fourteenth New-York Cavalry, while scouring in the vicinity of Grand Bayou, near Pensacola, with thirty of his men, encountered a force of fifty rebels, under Maj. RANDOLPH, of the Sixth Alabama Cavalry, and at once attacked them. A hand-to-hand fight, of about ten minutes' duration, ensued, at the end of which time the rebels fled in the greatest confusion, leaving the Union boys masters of the field and exhaustless of spoils. The enemy's loss footed up these: Killed and wounded, about 15; prisoners, 11—one lieutenant, two sergeants and eight privates; six horses, 21 muskets and a number of carbines. Our loss consist of Lieut. VON LOUNSBERG, slightly wounded, and one sergeant and one private wounded, neither seriously. One prisoner has since died, and the balance have arrived here in charge of Capt. SCHAETZ.

Gen. AMORY commands our forces at Pensacola, and is very popular. He keeps everything in the very best condition.

The enemy is concentrating a heavy force at Pollard, Ala., to operate on the line of the railroad from Pensacola to Montgomery.

The most terrible persecutions are inflicted on the people of that section who try to evade conscription. Hundreds of men, women and children are concealed in the swamps, and numbers die of starvation.

About two weeks since a boat put out into the bay at East Pass, which contained six refugees endeavoring to leave rebeldom. When less than a hundred yards from shore, a rebel scouting party dashed down, and fired a volley at them, killing three, wounding two, and leaving one only unhurted. He managed to get away with his ghastly load, and arrived safely at Fort Barancas, where the two wounded men are now in hospital.

A terrible storm has raged at Pensacola, but no marine losses are recorded. The sloop-of-war Richmond rolled so as to dip her guns under water.

Capt. SHIPLEY, Acting Chief Quartermaster, and Capt. LARNED, Assistant Quartermaster, came passengers by the Northerner to this city.

THE STATE CONVENTION.

The State Constitutional Convention met in New-Orleans on March 8. Judge DUBREUIL was elected to preside, and delivered an appropriate address upon taking the chair. Only preliminary business was transacted the first and second days' session.

On the third day no further business was done, except to present the roll of membership by the production of evidence of loyalty. The following resolution was offered:

Resolved, That the status of every member of this convention be, namely, that he be a legally qualified voter of the State, who has subscribed to the oath of the President's Proclamation of Dec. 8, 1863; that each and every member produce the same to the Secretary by 12 o'clock M., on the 8th of April, 1864, or be required to take the same before the President of the convention.

Mr. CARAZAS offered the following:

Resolved, That the President of this convention administer the iron-clad oath of Dec. 8, 1863, to each and every one of the members of this convention.

SPEAKER—A motion has been made to lay this on the table.

The question being put the convention decided in the affirmative.

SPEAKER—The next resolution is the substitute of Mr. THOMAS. The substitute reads as follows:

"That each and every member of the convention of this body take the iron-clad oath, in order to banish all suspicion."

And that motion has been seconded.

The meeting decided to lay the motion on the table.

Mr. HOLMES—I move the original resolution (Mr. THOMAS's) be adopted.

The Speaker then read the original resolution.

A motion to adjourn was decided to be out of order.

An amendment to the original resolution was offered, to the effect that for the benefit of the House the Secretary be requested to record the names of those who had already taken the iron-clad.

A motion that the amendment be laid on the table having been seconded, was carried.

A motion to adjourn was lost.

The roll was then called on the original motion.

The Chair announced that the convention had adopted the resolution by a vote of 66 yeas to 11 nays.

THE RED RIVER EXPEDITION.

From the New-Orleans Era, April 8.

Capt. CHARLES S. BULKLEY, the Superintendent of Telegraphs in this department, arrived in town yesterday direct from Alexandria, which place he left on Monday. We learn from him that the report published in the Times of Monday morning, that DICK TAYLOR had got in the rear of our army and attacked Alexandria, has not the slightest foundation in truth. There has been no fight at Alexandria, and no enemy in that vicinity, since its occupation by our forces.

The army is moving on, in good health and spirits. Hundreds of citizens are flocking into Alexandria, and eagerly taking the President's "iron-clad" oath. Great numbers of men who have been concealed in swamps to escape conscription, are also coming in and enlisting in the service of the United States. The number of these who have so enlisted already amounts to hundreds. These men are disgusted with the "Confederacy," and, what is more, are ready to peril their lives in the service of the Union, animated by the double desire of serving their country, and of avenging the wrongs they and their families and friends have endured.

THE GUNBOATS OVER THE SHOALS.

Correspondence of the Tribune.

ALEXANDRIA, Tuesday, March 29.

I now send you a few lines to let you know where we are. We arrived here on Saturday morning and went into camp about three miles above Alexandria on the Red River. Our route lay over the same road we went last Fall, through Opelousas, and then we took the Washington and Alexandria road. We were about ten days in making the distance—about 175 miles. The last two days our march was over some of the worst road I have ever seen. It rained most of the time, and the mud was so deep and heavy that it was almost impossible to march.

I suppose you have received the latest news from here, by the transports. The advance under Gen. SMITH left here on Saturday morning for Shreveport, just as we arrived, and we have orders to move in the morning for the same place. I hear that the rebs have an army of between 20,000 and 30,000, and that they will make a stand about fifty miles from here, but this is doubted. It is thought here by those that ought to know, that the first stand they make will be at Shreveport, where, it is said, they are strongly fortified, and have provisions enough to stand a siege for several months. The gunboats—seven in all—have got over the shoals, and will cooperate with the land forces. All the gunboats that could get over the shoals have gone. Major-Gen. BANKS has his headquarters on the steamer Black Hawk, at this place. Our scouting and foraging parties are bringing in large quantities of cotton and droves of cattle and ponies. There are nearly two thousand bales of cotton here now, and the cry is still it comes. The troops of the old Thirteenth Corps are in fine spirits and in good health—generally. We send one hundred and thirty sick down on the Warner to-day to the hospital in New-Orleans. I believe there were none of them dangerously sick.

I just hear that a report has come in that a portion of Gen. STEELE's forces from Arkansas has taken possession of Shreveport, but cannot learn any of the particulars, only that it was surrendered without firing a gun. If this is true, we are getting along better than we had hoped for. Hoping to give a more full account of things next time, I remain yours, *

—The Yale Literary Magazine states that at the last State election, of 183 professors and students who voted in New-Haven, only nine voted the Democratic ticket.

AFFAIRS IN TENNESSEE.

The Prosperous North and the Peeled South—Gens. Grant, Sherman and Thomas—Signs of the Summer Struggle—Consolidating Corps—Getting Ready—April in Tennessee.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Friday, April 8, 1864.

It is pleasant, after an absence of several weeks, to tread again the teeming soil of Tennessee. I say teeming, not literally, of course, with the earth's rich products, for the grim blood-dripping visage of war has so frightened nature in this region, that she has yielded her fair fruits of late very sparingly—but teeming with great events soon to be developed, and with hopes, longings, expectations, beliefs, of a brilliant future soon to dawn, whose substantial realization will make him who seemed a very visionary, a veritable prophet.

After looking for a season at the great hive of the North, more humming and swarming, as it seemed, in all its cities and towns, in spite of the war, or, perhaps, in consequence of it, than ever before, it is striking and instructive to mark the contrast which a war-stricken and ravaged region like this presents. Misery among the masses here, prosperity there! The one, with full employment, well paid, well fed, well clad, well lodged, working out their daily tasks with cheerful countenance, blithe spirits, a brave heart and a tranquil mind. The other, with little to do, and that unproductive, homeless wanderers, very often listless, irresolute, disheartened, poverty-pinched, woe-begone and forlorn. I describe an immense class of Tennesseans, large numbers of whom are refugees, and whom the desolations of war have reduced to a condition but slightly better than that of paupers.

What has brought them to this wretched state? Tennessee's secession indisputably—her loudly joining South Carolina's hideous crusade against the Government—her criminal breaking away at the back of treason from a fostering country's encircling arms. This is the whole story. Kentucky remained true in spite of the traitors within her, who strove to pull her glory down—and Kentucky has been but slightly scathed. Let her swing loose from her Union moorings, and the execrations of Virginia and Tennessee will deface and blast her own fair soil. The alternative is to stay in the Union and live and prosper, or be scourged and ruined by leaving it, is certain and inexorable. Tennessee is simply reaping as she has sown. Her experience has been a bitter one indeed. But the terrible lessons of the past three years promise to prove the most profitable she has ever learned.

The situation here has changed very little within the couple of months since I wrote you last. The principal change, that of the removal of Lieut.-Gen. GRANT's headquarters from Rachelle to Washington, the country has known long ago, and has applauded his being invested with the chief command of our armies. He has entered upon the tremendous responsibility of his high position under very favorable auspices, so far as the prestige of brilliant and continuous successes, the deep confidence and fervid expectations of the country are concerned. We will not doubt that his future will cast no cloud upon the glory of his past.

Major-Gen. SHERMAN has quietly assumed the post vacated by his predecessor, and now occupies here as his headquarters the rebel CUNNINGHAM's splendid mansion, successively occupied by BURNS, ROSECRANS and GRANT.

Gens. ROSSEAU and GRAFTON have still their headquarters here, and administer efficiently and acceptably the respective departments whose character and limits I have before described.

Gen. THOMAS is at Chattanooga, and where his post of duty is, he is very sure to be. Since the rebellion called him into the field he has remained in the field, without a day's furlough during all the period. He is every inch a soldier, born, as it might seem, for the camp, and to command also, as events have proved. The hero of Chickamauga, saving our army on that terrible field from complete rout and overthrow, and all Tennessee, probably, from the rebel clutches. There are other considerations which entitle him to the still warmer gratitude and confidence of all true hearts. Being a Virginian, and his high worth well known and appreciated, no urgency of solicitation of tempting offers were left untried by rebel authorities to swerve him from loyalty and make him a partner in treason. All in vain, he remained staunch and true as steel. And his approved fidelity, when so many were "faithless found," will surely be among the brightest laurels that are henceforth to adorn his victor brows.

The note of preparation for the campaign about to open, sounds out clearly here as well as elsewhere. Troops are pouring into the city and toward the front with the arrival of every train. The returned veterans with recruited ranks, go forward heroically to the toils and hardships of the field and the stern conflicts impending. The furlough policy for these veterans has proved itself eminently judicious, and this, with the bounty policy, has turned out a grand success. Volunteering is better than drafting, even if the former be a little expensive, while a visit home is itself to the soldier, in more respects than one, a recuperating agent. As yet, the effect of this policy upon the enlistments of Nashville are at this moment white with camps. Every hill-top is populous and vocal with soldiers, the most of them in transitu, and soon to mingle with the surging masses of the army about Chattanooga. When that army does move in earnest, as move it soon must, there will be a shaking in the States bordering the Gulf, and in those east of them, which the waves of the Atlantic wash. We are ignorant, of course, of the plan of the opening campaign, but think, with some little special pride perhaps, in the splendid army lying in front of us, that from its advance and operations the most decisive results are to spring. I think if Charleston is to fall and Richmond be taken, this army is to play no important, if not an essential part, in the consummation. But a few weeks probably will enable us to see somewhat through the mists which all eyes are longing to pierce.

The consolidating of army corps is not confined to the Army of the Potomac, but reaches that of the Cumberland. The Eleventh and Twelfth Corps, hitherto commanded by HOWARD and SLOCUM, are just consolidated under the name of the Twentieth Army Corps, to be under the command of the heroic HOOKER. Gen. HOWARD takes the Fourth Corps, heretofore GRANGER's, while Gen. SLOCUM will at Grant's order be ordered to report elsewhere. These changes, no doubt, will show increased efficiency and are the hoped-for harbinger of triumphs in store for these gallant commands.

The opening of the campaign cannot be delayed. The weather during March and until now, has been greatly inopportune for field operations, storms of rain and snow and sleet being in the ascendant. The reclaiming and recruiting process, too, has been necessarily slow, but the moment the roads are fit for horse into the field to commence work aright, it vex-ations is unavoidable. The preparations will be completed soon, and then the country will not have long to wait for tidings that will make every pulse beat quicker, and thrill with joy every patriotic soul.

Apropos of the weather, I fancied, after turning my back upon the early blasts and chilling wintry aspect and atmosphere of a Northern March, that I should sit myself down here in the very lap of Spring, with green grass, bright flowers, sweet perfumes and sweeter bird songs to greet me. I am disappointed. Yesterday, Leaving New-York in a storm of snow, I found the same storm changed into snow at Harrisburgh, piling its fleecy deposit a foot deep on the top of the Alleghanies, and reaching away onward to within twenty miles of Pittsburgh. At Louisville it was rain again, with a deluge-like copiousness, no vegetation visible, save a plot of grass here and there which looked frightened as if it had come forth too soon. Between Louisville and Nashville, 185 miles, the magnificently wooded region, stretching along most of the route, was as utterly bare of verdure as any New-York one in the beginning of April. Within twenty miles or so of Nashville some peach blossoms looking faint and irresolute, gave evidence that nature was really "making an effort," and that brighter signs were coming, though none as yet appeared. At Nashville bright faces were in requisition still, and the Spring's soft sounds and sweet sights, hardly nearer, seemingly, than in the highlands. This seems clearly a case of Northern influence—the Northern climate accompanying the march toward the gulf of Northern principles and institutions. The people here indeed deny this, say this Spring is exceptional, and mutter something about the "oldest inhabitant" never having seen the like. This, however, may be only the prejudice, stoutly refusing to acknowledge any favor to the South, springing north of Mason's and Dixon's line. C. V. S.

CENTRAL AND SOUTH AMERICA.

A Printing-Press Seized by the Government—Action of the Authorities—The Congress of the Peoples—From the Interior—Grand Reception of President Mosquera in Bogota.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

PANAMA, Tuesday, April 5, 1864.

Some little excitement was gotten up last week in relation to the seizure by the Government of a printing-press on which a paper called the Commercial Chronicle was printed. This press was claimed by several parties, one of which was the State Government itself. Messrs. PLUNKETT & WHITEHOUSE, proprietors of the Chronicle, had borrowed it or hired it from one of the claimants, who subsequently made a bill of sale of it to them; but it is alleged, not till a process had been commenced against the seller for its possession, by the rightful owner. I do not know if I have even in this stated the exact facts, for it appears to have been a sort of "mixed up affair" altogether, and the rights of it cannot be known until further ventilated. At any rate, the Government claimed that it needed the press, and that it had a right under the law to expropriate it; and it did it by breaking open the printing-office on Friday last and carrying it off by force. One of the parties, Mr. PLUNKETT, claiming to be an American citizen, Consul McKEE felt called upon to protest against the seizure, and personally remonstrated with the officers who carried off the press at the time. Some one hundred persons collected around the office, principally, as they said, "to see the sport," and a few vented their displeasure in words while the job was being done. One of the claimants is an Italian, who is under the protection of the French Consul, another a British subject, and it is generally believed both the others are British.

Señor BUENAVENTURA GUERRERA was arrested and sent to prison a day or two since, it is said, preparatory to being sent to Cauca as a soldier. It is further reported that this action is taken because of his interference in the press seizure; but this is probably untrue.

The America, with the passengers of the Illinois, who left New-York on the 14th March, left Taboga Island in this bay with them on Sunday afternoon last. They were all in good health, and seemed to bear the delay with a good deal of equanimity.

The United States sloop-of-war Cyane is still in port. The United States sloop-of-war St. Mary's was at Valparaiso at last dates.

The presses of Peru and Chili are still urging all the Spanish Republics to send delegates to Lima to the "Congress of the Peoples." It will probably not meet till May. In connexion with this, I will notice that Señor GALARAZA Y MARMARENCO, Minister from Spain to Bolivia, and charged also with an important special mission to Peru, has been ventilating his opinions to the editor of the Epoca, in Lima. He thinks the end of the rebellion in the United States is very far distant; if the Union conquers some territory, it will gain no moral advantage whatever, because the Southern people are mortal enemies to the Northern, &c., &c., &c. He thinks the Mexicans are all crying for MAXIMILIAN, that France has no friends in the country. In fine, he thinks the future of all the people of the Spanish race in Mexico and hereabouts, depends absolutely upon concert between England, France, Italy and Spain. With such sentiments, he had better have remained at home, for all the good he can do, in the present state of feeling against European powers of the Spanish-American race.

We have dates from Bogota, the Capital, to the 13th March. MOSQUERA had arrived there on the 29th February, and was enthusiastically received by over 10,000 people, assembled to greet him. Salvos of artillery and the ringing of bells announced his entrance into the city. ARTEGORTA was begging for peace, and no doubt existed that President MURILLO, on his inauguration on the 1st of April, would rule over a united people.

SOUTH AMERICA.

New Railway Pass Discovered in the Andes.

PANAMA, Tuesday, April 5, 1864.

The British Steamship Company's two beautiful ships Quito and Peru arrived at Panama, the first from Callao, on the 24, and the last from Valparaiso and intermediate ports, yesterday. Dates from Valparaiso and Santiago de Chili are to the 17th, and Callao and Lima to the 26th of March. The Peru brings $355,100 in specie for Southampton, a good list of passengers, and the following freight:

For Southampton—295 serrones bark, 2 packages hats, 8 packages general. For Liverpool—110 tons copper ballis, 120 serrones bark, 769 bales wool, 300 bales cotton, 12 bales India rubber, 27 bags cocoa, 8 packages general. For New-York—119 serrones bark, 19 bales goat skins, 5 bales Sarsaparilla. For Panama—500 sacks flour, 20 barrels wine, 256 sacks codas, 40 sacks alfrecho, 1 serron hats, 10 packages general.

The Quito brings 426 bales of cotton for England. There is no news from Ecuador.

CHILI.

The canvass for the elections to Congress is progressing actively and spiritedly. It is calculated the Government will be supported by two-thirds of the new Deputies, while the balance will be divided between the ultra-liberals and ultra-conservatives.

The danger of war between Bolivia and Chili on the Mejillone boundary and guano question does not appear to be imminent. Peru has offered her mediation, but it has not yet been accepted, "because the preliminary question of offended dignity is yet pending." Nevertheless, the general belief is that the matter will be accommodated.

All Chili is at the present moment rejoicing in a very important discovery, just made. HENRY MELIGS, the American, having sent some engineers into the chain of mountains of Colchaqua, they discovered a pass highly favorable to the construction of a railroad, by which to connect the Atlantic and Pacific. The report states that the pass, called the "Valley of the Marshes," has an elevation of only 6,600 feet above the Central Valley of Chili, and its extent over the mountains is 87 miles. They calculated that the "total expense of the line would be $6,000,000," and time necessary for its construction four years. None of the grades and curves will be more difficult than those on the road from Pabellon to Chanarcillo, on which steam is used in the ordinary manner. On some portions of the line there are many indications of copper and silver.

I have not time to translate the report before the train leaves for Aspinwall, but give the principal points.

Some months ago, a miner resident in Curico, Señor TOMO NAVARRETE, presented himself before Mr. MELIGS and stated that he had found a new pass in the Andes, through which it would be possible to build a railroad. Two engineers were at once dispatched under the guidance of NAVARRETE, to survey the new pass, and after having spent a month in their examinations, and reached the Pampas on the other side, they returned to Santiago, at the end of February, where they began to prepare the report, which has just been laid before the scientific and mercantile world.

The new railroad, says the report, would have an extension of only 97 miles, an elevation of 4,600 feet, and would cost only eight millions of dollars, and requires four years to build it, offering no great difficulties to engineering. It ascends the valley of the River Tano in Chili, and after crossing the mountains, descends into that of the Rio Grande, one of the tributaries of the Rio Negro, which forms the frontier between the Argentine Republic and Patagonia. The report says that only two points require extraordinary works, one a narrow gulch of the River Tano, 7 miles long and only 30 feet broad, called "Los Indenrillos," and the other a ravine, called "Vergara," with an ascent of 400 feet per mile, 4 miles long. Both these difficulties are not insuperable to modern engineering, as the latter can be overcome by a zig-zag route, making the road only seven or eight miles longer, and the great obstacle offered by the mountains between the Tano and the Rio Grande is avoided by the discovery of a new valley, in the very heart of the Andes, the "Valle de las Cienagas."

Business continued to improve in Valparaiso. Large sales of cotton goods had been made, some of them on speculation. Purchasers of goods from Bolivia and the Argentine Provinces, had bought freely. The excitement produced by the rapid rise of copper in England had subsided, so that buyers now refuse to pay $21 in store. Freights of ores, &c., to Europe, average about £3 15. The American bark High Birdhead, just arrived, is offered for sale. Exchange on London, sixty and ninety days, 44 to 44¾ pence per dollar.

Mining operations are prosecuted actively, giving increased employment and circulating a large amount of wages. There has been a fair average of foreign arrivals, comprising nine assorted cargoes from Europe, two from the United States and four cargoes of English coal.

FRAUDS ON RECRUITS.

THE LAFAYETTE HALL BOUNTY BROKERS.

Letter from Gen. DIX—The Case of Hawley D. Clapp—Recruits Defrauded Out of Over Four Hundred Thousand Dollars.

HAWLEY D. CLAPP, recognized as the head and front here of bounty brokers, was arrested and sent to Fort Lafayette, where he yet remains. He addressed some time since an appeal to the Legislature for relief. The matter was referred to the Judiciary Committee, who applied to Gen. DIX, who caused the arrest, for information on the subject. The following is the General's reply:

HEADQUARTER'S DEPARTMENT OF THE EAST, NEW-YORK CITY, April 11, 1864.

Hon. Chas. J. Folger, Chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee:

DEAR SIR: Your note of the 9th inst. was received to-day, and it affords me pleasure to furnish you with the facts and circumstances attending the arrest and imprisonment of HAWLEY D. CLAPP.

When your note came to hand I was completing a report to the Secretary of War, a copy of which, with accompanying papers, I inclose, giving a detailed statement of the atrocious frauds committed upon recruits in this City, and particularly at Lafayette Hall, where Mr. CLAPP was the principal Bounty Broker—one of a class of agents who were brought into existence by the system adopted by the Committee of the Board of Supervisors, for procuring substitutes, these services being entirely unnecessary, and whose principal vocation, either by their own direct action, or through confederates, was to cheat men entering the service out of their bounties. The Committee, when the frauds had become too palpable and too extensive to be borne, obviated the evil, as far as they could, by the adoption of proper precautions, but not until a military order had been issued requiring the full amount of bounty to be paid to the recruit.

The Report to the Secretary of War enters into a full detail of those transactions, alike disgraceful to those who were concerned in them and to the community in the bosom of which they occurred. Mr. CLAPP received from the Committee of the Supervisors the bounties for a large number of recruits, ($300 for each,) who, as shown by sufficiently satisfactory evidence, were cheated out of the greater part of the money by him, or his parties who became with him in the business, as the money was paid into his hands. I consider him responsible for it; and I have demanded its payment, whenever a clear case offered which would enable me to sustain the demand, if possible.

It is only by the summary process of a military arrest that these fraudulent transactions can be reached. If they are brought into the civil courts, all remedy is hopeless. The recruits are the only witnesses, and the exigencies of the country will not permit them to be kept from the field.

The only alternatives, therefore, were to allow these scandalous frauds to go unredressed to the patriotic men who are offering their lives on the altar of their country, be robbed of the provisions which their fellow-citizens have made for their families, and to enlist the plunderers to accompany their victims, or to take, as I have done, some of the principal agents in these frauds into custody, to be held till they make restitution.

The amount of which accounts were defrauded at Lafayette Hall, where and while Mr. CLAPP was chief broker, cannot fall short of $400,000. I have succeeded in recovering about $100,000, and am sanguine of adding largely to this amount.

I am fully aware of the responsibility I have taken in these cases, and that the exercise of the power of arrest is only warranted by the circumstances in which the country is placed, and the special field which my report to the Secretary of War discloses. It has been exerted in a few cases only, and with the confident assurance that what I should be sustained by the Government and by the public judgment.

Although it is technically true, as Mr. CLAPP states in his petition to the Legislature, that "he has not held at any time, office under the Government, or had any contracts with the Government" itself, he stood in his capacity as bounty-broker in a relation to the military service which he seems to appreciate neither the scope nor the force.

Lafayette Hall, in which his agency was transacted, was occupied for military purposes. It was guarded by sentinels, and the men for which he was arrested, were performed within the State. It was, for all essential purposes, a camp, and he was amicable, furnished with rooms, and under convenient rents for himself and clerks, and engaged in paying recruits their bounties as chief broker, under an appointment, not directly from the Government, but from Gen. SPINOLA, the commanding officer. He was personally engaged in services of a strictly military character, and standing in much nearer relation to the Government than many men of some influence and wealth, who are by act of Congress, subject to martial law. My own judgment is strongly inclined to the conclusion that he may be tried by court-martial, and if he has not been brought before one yet, this, one chief reason is, that I desired to satisfy myself by consulting the course of proceedings in analogous cases, that I should not err in holding him to account before such a tribunal for the acts with which he is charged.

Under every inescapable form of entirely well founded proof, he was found in the case in which Mr. CLAPP was agent for the payment of bounties. Men, both white and colored, were offered employment as teamsters, wagon-masters and officers' servants, receiving from $30 to $40 per day in advance, and finding themselves enlisted as soldiers, while Mr. CLAPP received from $300 to $315 in each case. With what consideration the money was divided, he and they only can tell.

I have considered it enough that it was received by him, and not paid to the recruits who were entitled to it. In some cases hope have been seduced from their homes to secure their enlistment; in others men have been dragged from their families, with promises of bounties and furloughs, and when the full bounty was not paid, they have been told that they would receive the balance as soon as they should arrive at RIKER's Island. In short, there is no artifice or fraud which has not been resorted to in carrying out this system of plunder.

In one case reported to these headquarters by Mr. Supervisor BEDELL, Mr. CLAPP was compelled to make restitution, and his conduct was such that he was not allowed to transact business with the Supervisors in his own name, but continued it in the name of other parties.

I feel convinced that no class of men would be likely to take part in these outrages upon our gallant soldiers, or sympathize with the perpetrators, unless they cherished a secret sympathy with those who are endeavoring by force of arms to overthrow and destroy the government of their country.

Mr. CLAPP has been treated since his confinement with a leniency he does not deserve. He has had the same food as the men whom he has defrauded, and is much more comfortably lodged and housed. His counsel has been permitted to have private interviews with him, a privilege not generally granted to inmates of Fort Lafayette. I have indulged the hope that he would consent to disclose the names of others, more prominent than himself, who are believed to have participated in his fraudulent gains. He is not held for this purpose alone, but with the further view to compel complete restitution to those he has wronged, when the extent of the frauds, in which he is implicated, shall be ascertained, and also punished, and also for trial and punishment if it shall be decided that he is amenable to a military court. It has afforded me pleasure to comply with the request of your committee, and I earnestly hope that the disclosures I have made may lead to some legislative provisions to secure to recruits the bounties intended to be paid to them. I take the liberty of stating that in some instances the authorities of towns, have of the $300, raised for bounties, voted $100 to the recruit and $200 to the broker or procurer; a speculation so rapidly, which has led to every species of undersigns, deception and fraud.

I am satisfied that the Legislature could never have anticipated so gross a wrong to recruits, to taxpayers and the public service, and that suitable remedies will be imposed upon local authorities.

I have the honor also to transmit herewith a certified copy of the order under which Mr. CLAPP was sent to Fort Lafayette by Brig.-Gen. STANNARD, commanding New-York City and harbor.

I am, very respectfully,

Your obedient servant,

JNO. A. DIX, Major-General.

REPORT OF GEN. DIX TO THE SECRETARY OF WAR—EXTRACTS.

"When I was informed that recruits were defrauded of their bounties at Lafayette Hall, I sent for Gen. SPINOLA and communicated to him the information received. He was not aware of the truth of the statements, and assured me that the recruiting regulations were fully complied with; that no man was enlisted without being fully apprised of the nature of the service in which he was engaging; that no recruit was defrauded of his bounty; and that where a less sum than that Naval Intelligence.

The Navy-yard at Brooklyn presents an unusual appearance of activity. Large gangs of workmen are engaged in fitting out the many vessels now awaiting completion. There are thirty-eight sail of vessels at this yard, fourteen of which are now ready for sea. On account of the scarcity of seamen, some of them have been detained, but the bounty of $100 per year offered has the effect to bring into the service a large number of men. Commodore HARGRAN is now the Acting Commandant of the yard, during the absence of Admiral SIDNEY PAULDING, who goes to Washington to-day, in company with Admiral GREGORY, to attend the Wilkes Court-martial.

The steamship Algonquin will go to Providence at an early day to complete her machinery.

The iron-clad Onondaga will proceed to sea to-day.

The gunboat Nyanza will go into commission to-day.

The Rescher (prize steamer) is ready to go into commission, the Government having purchased her.

The steam-sloop Brooklyn was taken into commission on Thursday.

The tugs Rose and Fish are now ready to proceed to sea.

INCREASING THE MARINE CORPS.

In compliance with the decision of Congress, arrangements have been commenced for the increase of the United States Corps of Marines. Recruiting parties have been distributed throughout this City and Brooklyn. The $300 bounty will be paid in full to any person wishing to enlist, and a handsome sum of hand-money to those who bring recruits. The increase of this branch of the service is not to be limited, as the number of war-vessels without marines is so great that the supply can hardly equal the demand. The Marine Corps is the best possible place in which a man can settle.

THE NAVY REGISTER FOR 1864.

The new Navy Register is out. It contains the names of nearly one way vessels of all kinds, of which nearly 100 are tow-boats and small craft. Over 60 iron-clads and rams are registered. One of the most noticeable features of the book is the fact that the method (commenced in a former issue) of naming small vessels after the flowers of the field, has reached its climax, every floral cognomen in the whole category having been used. One of two classes are based after battles—a new idea—and we have the Gettysburgh, Antietam, Shiloh, &c. Of the iron-clad fleet a very large proportion is afloat, and of the ships building nearly all will be finished during the present year. The list of officers is the largest ever recorded in a Navy Register.

The Death of Mr. A. A. Lovett.

A meeting was held in this City, on the evening of the 14th inst., at the main office of the People's Telegraph Line, No. 21 Wall-street, to take into consideration the death of Mr. A. A. Lovett, the late Superintendent of the line.

A large number of the telegraphic fraternity, and other personal friends of Mr. Lovett, were in attendance.

Mr. WARREN SO. LEWIS was called to the Chair, and Mr. F. A. HARPER chosen Secretary.

On motion, the resolutions adopted at a meeting by telegraph in Providence, R. I., on Thursday, commencing "Death has visited our ranks," were read and unanimously adopted as the sense of this meeting:

WASHINGTON, April 14, 1864.

At a meeting of the managers, operators and clerks of the Pacific Telegraph Line, convened in the general office of the Superintendent, and by telegraph on the 4th April, 1864, Mr. M. V. S. FINCH, Manager of the New-York office, was made Chairman, and Mr. A. H. BAILEY, Manager of the Providence office, Secretary.

The following resolutions, offered by Mr. O. H. NORTH, manager of the Washington office, were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, Our personal friend and official superior, Mr. A. A. LOVETT, late Superintendent of the People's Telegraph Line, has been taken from us by the hand of Death, in the prime of his manhood and active usefulness, and just into operation, has been called from us suddenly and while engaged in the discharge of his duties; therefore,

Resolved, That in this dispensation, while recognizing the hand of Him who "doeth all things well," and bowing in humble submission to His will, we feel that we have lost a kind and considerate friend, and associate, with whom our personal as well as official relations have been mutually pleasant and profitable.

Resolved, That while mourning his loss as friends, we feel that the telegraphic profession is deprived of an able and devoted member, who, in all his diversified duties, from the humble position of a messenger, has distinguished himself by his duties, and whose untiring zeal, first success and usefulness, have suddenly cut off, is in the profession an irreparable loss.

Resolved, That we respectfully tender to his immediate relatives and friends the assurance of our heartfelt sympathy in this affliction, which has thus suddenly and unexpectedly come upon them; and we would remind those of the bereaved family, or of us, with whom he was so intimately associated, may mitigate, to some extent, the blow which has fallen upon them.

Resolved, That copies of these resolutions be engrossed and officially communicated to his aged father and his orphan son.

After the adoption of the foregoing it was unanimously

Resolved, That the proceedings of this meeting be published in the daily papers, and that we adjourn to meet at the Sixth House, No. 1 Broadway, at 4½ o'clock on Thursday afternoon, with the view to pay the last tribute of respect to our departed friend.

LAW REPORTS.

Notes of Admiralty Decisions.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT.

Before Judge Betts.

COLLISION BETWEEN STEAMER AND SAILING VESSEL—DUTY OF STEAMERS.

Charles G. Beardsley et al. vs. The Steamboat Metamora.—This was a libel filed by the owners of the sloop Gustin to recover the damages occasioned to her by a collision with the steamboat in the harbor of New-York. The collision happened in full day light. The sloop was going on a southwesterly course across the East River from South Ferry towards Redhook, the wind being light from the southwest by west. The steamboat was coming out of the North River into the East River, thus crossing the general line of direction which the sloop was pursuing. There was the usual conflict of testimony as to the circumstances of the collision.

Held by the Court—That as there was nothing in the way to prevent either from seeing the other, it is a legal presumption that they, in the exercise of their nautical obligations, had knowledge of the facts connecting their relative positions, which were necessary to the fulfillment of their several duties.

That the sloop was the privileged vessel under such circumstances, and the responsibility was cast upon the steamer to be so guided herself as that no injury should be inflicted by her on the sloop which was not unavoidable by the employment of means of omission or commission on the part of the latter.

That the sloop had little, if any more than drifting way on her, and there is nothing in the evidence favoring the notion that she was placed before the wind in a way to intercept or embarrass the steamer in her true direction up the East River. It was accordingly at the peril of the steamer to avoid her.

That it is neither averred in the answer nor proved that the steamboat had any lookout stationed forward.

That the question is of minor importance whether the midway of the steamer had been obstructed or stocked so as to prevent sight of her engine, or even whether she had received a backward motion before the actual collision took place. The result was injurious to the sloop and the consequences are attributable to the steamer, if derived from her wrongful act in being placed so near the sloop as that the latter must inevitably come against her by force of the tide, or current, or suction, or other propelling forces out of her control, as if the injuries came from the direct and aggressive act and movement of the steamer.

That in cases of collision between vessels meeting each other, the one under canvas and the other under steam, the prima facie obligation lies with the steamer to prove that the fault of the collision is attributable to the sailing vessel, if she would free herself from liability.

That there is nothing in the proofs relieving the steamer from this well established and most serviceable doctrine of the law, and that she fails to prove that the fault was attributable to the sloop.

Decree for libellants, with a reference to compute their damages.

For libellant, Mr. Fritche and Mr. Donohue; for claimants, Messrs. Benedict, Burr & Benedict.

FREIGHT ON COAL—CONSIGNEE BOUND BY BILL OF LADING.

James Maloney vs. Peter Butterly et al.—This was a libel for freight. The libelant, who was owner of the barge John Maloney, took on board her at Philadelphia a cargo of coal, to be carried to New-York. The coal was put on board by the vendee, consigned to the respondents. It was not laden on board by weight, but was received by the libelant on the representation of the shipper, and the libelant signed a bill of lading on these representations, acknowledging the receipt of 200 tons of coal on board, and agreeing to deliver it to the respondents at New-York. The vessel arrived in New-York, and the assignees of the bill of lading received the coal. They did not exact a measurement or weight of it as delivered from the boat, but carried it across the City to their own yard, where it was weighed, without the supervision of the carriers, and just then declared that it was city tons short, and declined to pay freight on that amount.

Held by the Court—That a rule of greater stringency may prevail as to a purchaser and sale of property than is exacted in relation to a mere bailment of it for carriage.

That the vendor of the coal acted as agent or factor of the purchaser, and is reasonably bound to satisfy the carriage price to the carrier, if the consignee does not accept the consignment, and pay the agreed price at the place of destination.

That the respondents are concluded from taking the defense of short weight. They are to be regarded as the factors of the consignor as well as consignees, and in that capacity to have virtually admitted and liquidated the quantity of the cargo, in relation to the freight payable to the carrier; A difference of quantity on the adjustment of the transaction between consignor and consignee must be adjusted between them. They are both to be regarded as having assented, through their acts and acquiescences to the righteousness of the libelant's demand as an agreed compensation for the services rendered.

Decree for the libelant for his claim with interest.

For libelant, Mr. Donovan and Judge Whiting. For respondents, Mr. Brown.

FRIDAY, April 15—P. M.

The price of Gold at the First Board of the Stock Exchange was 173¼@173¾ ⅌ cent., and at the Afternoon Board 173¼@173¾ ⅌ cent. Bills on London 190 ⅌ cent. for first-class bankers. These rates are 2@2½ ⅌ cent. lower than on last quotations. The extremes of Gold on the Street corners were 175@172 ⅌ cent.

There is a large popular demand for the new 10-40 years' 5 ⅌ cent. Loan, and the subscriptions at the First National Bank to-day were by far the heaviest, for any single day, since the Loan was opened. We hear from Boston that the heaviest subscriptions yet reported in that city were taken yesterday. The coupons of the Loan is entirely secured. The programme of the Treasury in reference to the rate of interest will not be changed, nor is there the slightest danger to the generous and loyal people of the country who subscribe at par that any portion of the $200,000,000 will be sold at a discount. On the contrary, we believe the whole sum will be taken up before the close of the fiscal year, and, that the subsequent mid-summer Loan, under the successes which we have a right to anticipate under Gen. GRANT, East and West, will be placed at 4 ⅌ cent. or not to exceed 4½ ⅌ cent. ⅌ annum. In the possible event of delay in such successes, no higher rate of interest in Gold than 5 ⅌ cent. will be paid for the service of the next fiscal year, and ought not to be with a good Tax Bill from Congress. The subscriptions to the New Loan reported since yesterday, are:

At Treasury Office	$170,250
First National Bank	725,000
Second National Bank	70,000
Together	$965,250

The above subscriptions, which make an immediate draft upon the old Associated Banks, for greenbacks, together with the sales of Gold from the Treasury to the Importers, yielding to-day about two millions in greenbacks and nearly as much yesterday, or checks settled exclusively in greenbacks, are disturbing the Money market to Stock Exchange borrowers. The rate is shaky 7 per cent. per annum, which is freely paid to-day to sustain the Railway speculation, in which the Bull interest largely preponderates. Some of the prominent Banks on the Street, we understand, already make considerable trouble in paying checks drawn upon them on subscriptions to the 10-40 Loan, in greenbacks; but this evidence of weakness is not yet general, or else Bank depositors and country Bankers would do well to turn their City balances into the Gold-bearing Bonds of the United States as quickly as possible.

The sales of Gold from the Treasury Office to-day at 165 ⅌ cent. to the Importers for Customs Duties, amount to $1,249,676. The Secretary of the Treasury is said to be still in the City, and will probably give proper directions to the Assistant Treasurer as to the rate or plan of settlement to the Importers next week. Meantime the Treasury Office is actively engaged in paying out in Gold the May Interest on the 6-20 Loan.

The export demand for Gold, through all the flurry of the week, has been less than was anticipated, and the shipments by to-morrow's steamers, from present report, will not much exceed a million of dollars.

The Stock Market was ¼c.@1c. per cent. lower than the best rates of yesterday on the Government 6 per cents. The Railway speculation in the forenoon ran 2c.@3c. per cent. lower, but recovered part of this decline at the Second Board. Mining Stocks were generally neglected, and a large amount of second installments upon the recent schemes made payable about the 20 May, is in a fair way of being forfeited, upon the principle that the first loss upon such concerns is the best saving of money.

At 4 o'clock the partial firmness of the Second Board on the Railway speculation gave way, and prices were lower on the Street. An attempt to rally Gold to 175 ⅌ cent. also failed, because of its abundance among the speculators to-day, and the absence of the usual facilities, even in a tight Money market to have it cleared cheap by short sellers, most of whom have closed up their accounts. The Harlem corner goes up vigorously, and heavy differences are said to have been paid to the leading Bull in the Stock to close contracts.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE REBELLION.

Our dispatches from Cairo bring us a story almost too horrible in its details for human belief, but which comes with such directness as to leave no doubt of its truth. The attack on Fort Pillow by the rebels under Forrest, which was announced yesterday, was followed up by frequent demands for its surrender, which were refused by Major Booth, who commanded the fort, but while these flags were being sent Forrest took occasion to make more favorable dispositions of his forces. The flags being refused, the fight was kept up until 3 P. M., when Maj. Booth was killed, and the rebels, in large numbers, swarmed over the intrenchments. Immediately upon the surrender ensued a scene which baffles description. Up to that time comparatively few of our men had been killed; but, inasmuch as fiends, the rebels commenced an indiscriminate butchery of the whites and blacks, including the wounded. Both white and black were bayonetted, shot or sabred; even dead bodies were horribly mutilated, and children of seven and eight years and several negro women killed in cold blood. Soldiers unable to speak from wounds were shot dead, and their bodies rolled down the banks into the river. The dead and wounded negroes were piled in heaps and burned, and several citizens who had joined our forces for protection, were killed or wounded. Out of the garrison of six hundred, only two hundred remained alive. The steamer Platte Valley came up at about half-past 3 o'clock, and was hailed by the rebels under a flag of truce. Men were sent ashore to bury the dead, and take aboard such of the wounded as the enemy had allowed to live. Fifty-seven were taken aboard, including seven or eight colored. Eight died on the way up to Cairo. Six guns were captured by the rebels, and carried off, including two ten-pound Parrotts, and two twelve-pound howitzers. A large amount of stores was destroyed or carried away. They seemed to be moving toward Memphis.

By the arrival of the steamships Continental and George Washington at this port yesterday, we have news from New-Orleans to the 9th inst., three days later. Alexandria dates of the 5th inst. report that Gen. Banks and Staff proceeded up the river, and were reported to be at Grand Ecore. All was quiet at Alexandria, and ample precaution taken against surprise by the enemy. The heavy iron-clads had dropped down to Fort De Russy. There was still sufficient water for the gunboats and transports to cross the falls. The streets of Alexandria were barricaded in case of raids by the rebels. Some five hundred of the people have taken the oath under the President's Amnesty Proclamation, and a Union meeting was held on the 4th inst. The steamer Luminary, before reported destroyed, was above the Falls, uninjured. The flagship Black Hawk was fired into by guerrillas below Grand Ecore, and Major Gifford, paymaster, and an engineer and surgeon were wounded.

Encouraging news from Gen. Steele's army, up to April 7, is received. He had then reached a point on the Little Missouri River, about 25 miles from Camden, and expected next day to form a junction with Gen. Thayer, who was marching from Fort Smith. Gen. Steele had been several times attacked by Marmaduke and Shelby with cavalry and artillery, but in each case the rebels had been handsomely repulsed. There was a large force of rebels in advance, but it was not believed they would make much of a stand.

Recent Pensacola advices report a fight between Capt. Schmidt, Company M, Fourteenth New-York Cavalry, and fifty rebels, under Major Randolph, of the Sixth Alabama Cavalry, near that place. After a ten minutes' hand-to-hand fight, the rebels fled. Their loss was fifteen killed and wounded and eleven prisoners. Our loss was three slightly wounded, including Lieut. Von Luettwitzen. Gen. Asboth commands at Pensacola.

The news from Texas by the last arrival is unimportant. All was quiet on the Rio Grande, and there was no prospect of a movement. Gen. Dana had taken leave of his command, and was superseded by Gen. Fitz-Henry Warren. Gen. Herron was sick with small-pox.

A dispatch from Louisville yesterday says Col. Fray, commanding at Paducah, telegraphs that the place is again attacked, and the town full of rebels.

LEGISLATURE.

In the Senate, yesterday, among the bills reported were the following: To provide an armory for the Eighth Regiment National Guard; against the bill relative to the West Shore Railroad in Rockland County; in favor of the Assembly bill to regulate the passenger and freight tariff on the Hudson River Railroad. Among the bills passed were the following: Providing for the extension of the Chenango Canal, and appropriating $150,000 for the present year; for the improvement of the Champlain Canal. This appropriates $65,000.

The session of the Assembly was chiefly devoted to a discussion of the report of the Banking Committee. A motion was adopted declining to print the majority report. Four thousand copies of the minority report were ordered printed. After the recess, the Committee on Towns and Cities occupied the hall in listening to the arguments of Judge Rosekrans in behalf of the taxpayers of New-York.

GENERAL NEWS.

In the Court of Sessions, yesterday, Daniel Brooks, who was convicted of manslaughter in the third degree, was brought up for sentence. His Honor said that the facts of the case showed that Brooks might have avoided the affray with Smith. There were no mitigating circumstances, and the sentence of the court would be as heavy as the limitation of the law allowed. He was sent to the State Prison for four years.

The New-Orleans True Delta notices the return to the loyal fold of two distinguished citizens of Louisiana, who have been acting with the rebels. One of them, E. K. Elgee, was formerly a member of the old Whig party, but was a delegate to the convention that adopted the secession ordinance. Louis Texada was also an Old-line Whig, and was Know-Nothing candidate for Governor of Louisiana in 1856, but was beaten.

The Court of Oyer and Terminer was occupied all day yesterday in the Nixon case. Only two witnesses were introduced by the defence, both of whom testified that Brown struck Nixon first, and knocked him down, and that Brown was a tall, powerful man, while Nixon was only able to stand on one leg with difficulty. The remainder of the day was occupied in summing up, by Mr. Chipman for the defence, and Hon. John Cochrane for the prosecution.

The United States gunboat Chenango, while outward bound yesterday afternoon, exploded her port boiler opposite Fort Hamilton, severely scalding thirty-three persons connected with the engineers' department.

Most kinds of Domestic Produce and General Merchandise were less freely dealt in yesterday, the speculative mania having been checked by the sharp reaction in Gold; and although holders were reluctant to sell at reduced rates, the tendency of the market was decidedly in favor of buyers. Flour declined 15c.@25c. ▼ bbl.; Wheat, 3c.@4c., and Corn, 2c.@3c. ▼ bushel, with limited transactions reported. Whisky also fell off 2c.@3c. ▼ gallon. Provisions closed quite heavily. Cotton and Groceries were less buoyant. The supplies of desirable styles of domestic and imported Dry Goods were much reduced, and with a good inquiry from jobbers, country buyers, and, in part, from speculative operators, prices were very firm and on the advance, though the heavy fall in Gold tended to depress the market toward the close. Freights continued depressed.

Gold 173¼ ▼ cent. at Afternoon Board of the Stock Exchange yesterday—a fall of 2¼ ▼ cent. from the previous quotation. Bills on London 190 ▼ cent. The Treasury received about $1,000,000 Greenbacks in this market for the 10-40 Loan, and $2,000,000 for sales of Gold to the Importers, at 165 ▼ cent., to pay Customs. Money sharp, at 7 ▼ cent. The Railway speculation lower; Mining fancies neglected.

Is It Imbecility or Treachery?

Congress met nineteen weeks ago. Gold, which is the only real barometer of national credit and public confidence, then sold fifty-two per cent. over the money of the Government. It now sells at seventy-four per cent. over. What has been the cause of this weakening of the national credit? Not disaster in the field. We have had none. Not any loss of our military strength. Our armies have never been stronger than to-day. Not any new strength of the rebellion. It has gained nothing. Not any fear of foreign intervention. Foreign intervention was never less feared than to-day. Not any diminution of the resources of the North. Northern industry was never so active or so profitable. What, then, is the cause of it? The cause is to be found in the south wing of the National Capitol—there and nowhere else. It lies in the flagrant unfaithfulness of those who were sent there to be the Representatives of the people.

The Constitution declares that "all bills for raising revenue shall originate in the House of Representatives." It thus devolved upon that branch of Congress the special responsibility of maintaining the public credit. The Executive branch of the Government, through its financial head, Mr. Chase, on the fourth day of the session presented a detailed and clear statement of the financial necessities of the Government, and urged in strong language that they should be early provided for. It declared, and with unquestionable truth, that measures of taxation must be the chief means of effecting this, laying down the broad principle, "It is hardly too much, perhaps hardly enough, to say that every dollar raised for extraordinary expenditures, or reduction of debt, is worth two in the increased value of national securities, and increased facilities for the negotiation of indispensable loans." The Executive did its full duty in exhibiting the financial situation, and invoking prompt legislative action to meet its requirements.

With all these tremendous responsibilities resting upon it, the House of Representatives has yet done nothing. December, up to Christmas, it spent in introducing resolutions, and letting off a large amount of buncombe generally against the rebellion. It then adjourned for twelve days, without any decent reason. There can be no decent reason why Congressmen, alone of all public servants in the land, and alone of all people above the condition of loafers, should abandon all work for twelve days when the old year goes out and the new year comes in. The merchant, or the lawyer, or the mechanic who should quit business or work for so long a time, with no better reason, would be despised. January was largely employed in concocting and spouting over some more resolutions. Toward the latter part of the month there was some blood-and-thunder talk about confiscation, and a decision to branch out in that line as soon as there was an opening. The subject was about as appropriate to the actual situation, as if it had related to property in the moon. In February the main attention was given to the whisky tax. A pretty good beginning was made toward putting a proper tax on this article, but in a little time, by some unaccountable influence, the whisky interests carried the day. So nothing was made by that. The other matter taken in hand was the Senate Enrollment Bill, which the Senate had passed in order to give the former law practical effect. The House nullified it all by reducing the commutation back from four hundred to three hundred dollars, and by making that commutation exempt for three years instead of for the particular draft. In March, a bill for the establishment of a Bureau for Freedmen was passed. The little Gold Bill was taken up and rejected by a strong vote, and, with characteristic consistency, was passed a few days afterward by a vote just as strong. The bill regulating and perfecting Secretary Chase's system of national banks was taken up, and cobbled over with all sorts of incongruous amendments, and turned into such a piece of botch-work that it was kicked out of doors in disgust. Since April came in we have had a foray upon the Camden and Amboy Railroad that has come to nothing; a fulmination of loud words against the Emperor Napoleon's operations in Mexico; and a Quixotic, disgraceful raid against the freedom of debate.

We defy any man in that House to put his finger upon a solitary measure passed by it, calculated to increase the financial strength of the Government one iota. The thing has not been seriously attempted. The nineteen weeks have been utterly wasted in empty speech-making, or in dawdling over irrelevant matters, or in working positive mischief. The body has shirked all serious work. Upon no question, save when, as in Long's case, some uncommon folly was to be committed, have more than two-thirds of the members voted; and for much of the time, it has been almost impossible to keep up a quorum. In the face of such flagitious unfaithfulness on the part of the legislative branch to which the financial concerns of the country are especially intrusted, the wonder is that our financial credit has not been even more grievously weakened—that there is not even a wider hiatus between gold and greenbacks.

The people have been patient under this up to the uttermost point of endurance. We warn the House to set about their proper business, if they care to escape an outburst of indignation that would politically ruin every man of them. The American people, beyond all free people that ever existed, are tolerant of imposition; but it is not in their nature, nor in human nature, to bear quietly such faithlessness in a crisis so fearful. They know full well that the only danger in this struggle of the Government is the financial danger, and that this danger must be fatal, unless there be timely and wise action on the part of their public servants. They know, too, that the prices of all the necessaries of life are daily becoming more burdensome, and must become insupportable unless the currency is adjusted to a sounder basis. They know that it is the business of Congress, and especially of the popular branch of Congress, to protect the public credit, and remedy every financial evil. They intend to hold the House to that responsibility. They do not intend that their business and industry shall be smothered with worthless paper; that their children shall be bowed down by a mountain of debt; that their brothers in the field shall shed their blood for nought; that the flag of the country shall go down in ruin and disgrace. And they do not intend to put up with this remissness in the National Capitol, which they are fast learning to look upon not as mere remissness, but as infamous treachery.

The One-Term Principle.

The argument for the reélection of Mr. Lincoln, drawn from the confusion likely to be caused by a change in the Administration at present—certainly one of the strongest that can be used—has a good deal of light thrown upon it by the defence offered by the authors of the Federalist for the Constitutional eligibility of the President. It appears, in fact, that it was provision for precisely such a crisis as that through which we are now passing, that the convention mainly had in view when they permitted the President to serve for more than one term. Hamilton says, in No. 72:

"The actual conduct of foreign negotiations, the preparatory plans of finance, the application and disbursement of the public moneys in conformity to the general appropriations of the Legislature, the arrangement of the army and navy, the direction of the operations of war—these and other matters of a like nature, constitute what seems to be perfectly understood by the administration of government. The persons, therefore, to whose immediate management these different matters are committed, ought to be considered as the assistants or deputies of the Chief Magistrate; and on this account, they ought to derive their offices from his appointment, at least from his nomination, and be subject to his superintendence. This view of the thing will at once suggest to us the intimate connection between the duration of the executive magistrate in office, and the stability of a system of administration.

To undo what has been done by a predecessor is very often considered by a successor as the best proof he can give of his own capacity and desert; and in addition to this propensity, where the alteration has been the result of public choice, the person substituted is warranted in supposing that the dismission of his predecessor has proceeded from a dislike to his measures, and that the less he resembles him, the more he will recommend himself to the favor of his constituents. These considerations, and the influence of personal confidences and attachments, would be likely to induce every new President to promote a change of men to all the subordinate stations, and these causes together could not fail to occasion a disgraceful and ruinous mutability in the administration of the Government."

And he adds further on:

"Experience is the parent of wisdom, is an adage, the truth of which is recognized by the wisest as well as simplest of mankind. Where more desirable or more essential than in the first magistrate of a nation? Can it be wise to put this desirable and essential quality under the ban of the Constitution, and to declare the moment it is acquired, its possessor shall be compelled to abandon the station in which it was acquired, and to which it is adapted? * * * Without supposing the personal essentiality of the man, it is evident that the change of the Chief Magistrate at the breaking out of a war, or any similar crisis, for another even of equal merit, would at all times be detrimental to the community, as it would substitute inexperience for experience, and would tend to unhinge and set afloat the already settled form of the Administration."

We doubt very much whether any Government was ever placed in circumstances which made time so necessary both to develop its policy and to test its value, as our present Administration. It is not simply with the conduct of a war that it is charged, but with the conduct of a revolution, and it is utterly impossible that any sound or fair estimate can yet be formed of the goodness or badness, wisdom or folly, of the means to which it has thought fit to resort. The march of events has imposed on the President and his Cabinet three of the most tremendous problems that were ever submitted to any statesman—the payment of the expenses of a gigantic war, the subjugation of such a country as the South, the emancipation of four millions of negro slaves. One of these alone would be sufficient to try the capacity of the ablest master of the art of Government that has ever lived. They must be very ignorant or very wild who suppose that we can yet see the end of the great undertaking, or are in any position to judge of the skill with which it is being carried out. And to commit it to fresh hands until we can judge, would be a demonstration of contempt for training and experience so marked, so full of short-sighted impatience, that there are few thinking men who witnessed it who would not doubt our capacity for self-government. The possession of this capacity is not proved by pursuing the even tenor of our way in "piping times of peace," but by preserving our balance and temper, and displaying forethought and self-restraint in seasons of great peril and perplexity.

A Long Neglected Matter.—The terrible wreck of the steamship San Francisco ten years ago, just after she had left this port on her way to California, must yet be fresh in the memory of hundreds of thousands of people. It will be recollected that the San Francisco left here on the 22d Dec., 1853, having aboard some eight hundred souls, among whom were the Third Regiment of United States Artillery. On the night of the 22d she encountered a furious storm, which rendered her unmanageable, and on the morning of the 24th she was struck by a violent wave, which shattered her quarter deck, her hurricane deck and carried away her upper saloon, and all the officers and soldiers, (some 200,) who had taken shelter in it from the storm. The ship was so damaged by this shock that it required the utmost efforts of all on board to save themselves from going to the bottom. While in this perilous condition, within the next few days three vessels—the Kilby, Capt. Low; the Three Bells, Capt. Creighton, and the Antarctic, Capt. Stevens—hove in sight; and though they had suffered greatly themselves from the storm, they tendered assistance and succor to those on board, and promised to stand by the wreck at all hazards. They did so faithfully; and a report on the subject, presented to the Senate by Jeff. Davis, thanked and praised one of these officers, who, "for six tempestuous days and nights, in a spirit of disinterested humanity, and at the imminent peril of himself and crew, stood by the sinking steamer until her gallant Commander, the last man on board, abandoned the doomed and deserted vessel."

The news of these heroic acts thrilled the whole country, and thanks and testimonials were presented to the gallant Captains by various mercantile and shipping associations. The matter, however, had a national as well as a local bearing, not only in its own character, but because a large number of those who were rescued were United States soldiers; and accordingly a measure was brought before Congress providing for the purchase of a gold medal to each of the three Captains, and appropriating a sum of money for their recompense, as a national testimonial. The Captains, however, being actively engaged on the high seas, took no part in pushing the measure along, and it was dropped in the pressure of business at the close of the session. In 1861, the matter was taken up by the leading shippers and merchants of this City, but it was forgotten in the fury and excitement of secessionism which then rose. In the meantime, one of the three Captains has died. But the merchants of New-York are anxious that the matter should neither be overlooked nor finally forgotten, and Senator Morgan, as their representative, has now interested himself in it. We suppose no one who remembers the circumstances will say that the national testimonial was not merited; and we suppose no one interested in ships, or who is liable, in the course of his existence, to have his life imperiled on the stormy seas, will deny that it should be provided before the two living Captains pass away.

Good Out of Evil.—In one respect the recent action of the stage proprietors in raising their prices from six to ten cents has conferred a positive and very decided benefit on the riding public. The lines of omnibuses which have taken this course are no longer overcrowded. There is no more treading on people's toes, sitting involuntarily in their laps, and pitching about helter-skelter, as if the stage were a ship at sea in a high gale, for lack of seats. Every passenger now can get a seat—and even if he has to pay something extra for it, the boon is worth having.

Infamy to the Rebel Arms and to Order.—It is a fearful, a horrible story that comes to us from the Mississippi by way of Cairo. The attack on Fort Pillow, above Memphis, and the butchery of our troops, as narrated, is enough to make the blood run cold. The very fact that the rebels are perpetually threatening such deeds is sufficient indication that they are quite capable of committing them.

But while we speak thus of the hideous words and deeds of the rebel butchers, we are sure there is also an account to be settled with some of our own officers in that locality. Why commands in West Tennessee? How is it that with an idle army of such magnitude, of infantry, cavalry and artillery as we have in that department, and with fortifications of such immense strength as line the Tennessee and Mississippi Rivers—how is it that that whole country is ceaselessly traversed, trampled upon, and its inhabitants butchered by rebel bands? How is it that the guerrilla, Forrest, with a few thousand freebooters, has been allowed to ride to and fro for six weeks, capturing towns, capturing forts, and playing havoc wherever he chooses? It is the most infamous thing to our arms that has ever occurred in the course of the war. Lieut.-Gen. Grant, who commands all our armies and every department, will doubtless at once now look after his own responsible subordinates, as well as those irresponsible rebels.

Improvements in the Manufacture of Gas.—We have received a small pamphlet describing a new and improved method of manufacturing gas, for lighting and heating purposes, which is likely to be of marked benefit to every class of the community. It seems to be very simple in its character, and, according to the evidence furnished by experience, and the opinions of the most skillful and scientific judges, there can be no question of its practical value. It is not proposed to produce gas from any new material; bituminous coal is still used for this purpose. But at a particular stage of the manufacture a supply of hydrogen and other gases, produced by the decomposition of superheated steam introduced into a retort containing anthracite coal, is conveyed to the retorts charged in the common way with bituminous coal; and in this way, while the quality of the gas produced is decidedly improved, its cost is reduced more than twenty-five per cent. This fact rests on the testimony of Mr. Joseph Battin, who is widely known as the constructing engineer of a great number of gas-works in various sections of the country, and on the experience of the City of Elizabeth, in New-Jersey, where it has been thoroughly tested by experiment.

A reduction of one quarter in the price of gas will not only be of great advantage to the great mass of the people who use it for lighting purposes, but will inevitably lead to its general use for purposes of heating also; for it will be much cheaper as well as better, in every way, than any other fuel now in use. A company which has purchased the patent rights involved, has also obtained from the City a grant of power to "lay pipes and mains through all the streets, avenues, lanes, alleys, squares and other public places in this City, for fifty years;" and it is about to enter upon the active exercise of this right. Mr. W. H. Appleton is the President of the company, and books of subscription to the stock are to be opened to-day at the office of Jenkins, Rhoads & Co., No. 46 Exchange place. The very high price borne by the stocks of all the gas companies now in existence will commend this new enterprise to public attention. For the sake of gas-consumers, whose numbers it must greatly increase, we certainly hope it will be successful.

Amusements.

Academy of Music.—There will be a grand matinée here to-day—the last of the season, for Mr. Maretzek intends closing early in the ensuing week—at which "Robert le Diable" will be played. The entertainment is in all respects a remarkable one. Ordinarily the feeblest operas are selected for morning performances. Here we have a three-decker carrying so many guns that even "Faust," that modern iron-clad, cannot materially injure it. The cast is admirable, and introduces four of the best members of the company in four of their best rôles. If the weather be fine, we would advise our Sanitary Fair friends to include the Academy in their rounds of sight-seeing. If Mr. Maretzek plays the opera next season, it will be at increased prices—for the prices are to be raised after the recess. Mr. Maretzek has discovered to his chagrin that even crowded houses do not pay at the present tariff of admission. We assured him that he would make that discovery when he first returned from Havana. Every article about the opera, from a voice to a yard of calico, has increased in price, and it is, considering the small margin at the best of times, folly to pretend, in the face of this fact, to preserve the old rates of admission.

Niblo's Garden.—A special entertainment will, by the kindness of Mr. Wheatley, be given here this afternoon in aid of the funds of the Sanitary Commission. It is of a highly interesting character, being no other than the popular spectacle of "Cinderella." All the characters are sustained by children, and in such numbers that Mr. Allen Dodworth has alone contributed one hundred from his dancing academy. Private theatricals seldom take so pleasant a shape as this, and we will venture to say that the young folks will be rewarded for their efforts.

Wanted—A Cheap Day for the Fair.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

There seems to be such a general feeling that there should be at least one cheap day at the fair, that I venture a suggestion how it might be arranged. When season tickets were issued it was believed that the fair would close at the end of this week; if, therefore, it is kept open a longer time, and holders of season tickets are still allowed to use them, would it not be quite just that on one day of the extra time they should not be "good" for admittance? That on that day every one should pay twenty-five cents. Ticket-holders who have probably already visited the fair many times, could surely afford to miss one day or else pay twenty-five cents extra. Thus the rooms would not be crowded with persons who go daily, and a chance would be given for the money to go once. Can you think of any other plan to give more general satisfaction? A LADY.

The Fair and Fairness of the Book Committee.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Since the 21st of March I have been trying to give several hundred bound volumes of books, by different authors, to the fair, valued at $300. Some of the books treat of Spiritualism. The Publishers' and Booksellers' Committee constantly refuse to receive and sell them, or allow me or anyone to sell them for the benefit of the fair, for the reason, they say, that the committee don't believe in Spiritualism. But what has that to do with furnishing a blanket to warm a wounded soldier? But I found among their books some entitled Philosophy of Hegel, (which I purchased.) Do the committee believe in these books? or do the publisher's types exactly the matter in them. I hope there is authority somewhere in the management of this fair to correct such wrongs as those of which I complain. C. PARTRIDGE.

The National Academy of Design.—The thirty-ninth annual exhibition of the National Academy of Design was thrown open to the public yesterday, at the Derby Gallery, No. 625 Broadway. There are less than the average number of paintings upon the walls, and the display, as a whole, strikes us as below the average degree of excellence. There are few very striking pictures, and we are glad to say no very bad ones. Cornelius Mayer's "Dying Soldier," Anderson' "Blacksmith's Shop," Gifford's "Sunset" and Beard's "Dissecting Student," are among the most noteworthy works. The "Blacksmith's Shop" is full of excellence. It is far superior to anything of the kind, in many particulars, that we have seen from an American artist.

A New Champagne.—Mr. W. H. Ward, No. 7 Broad-street, has introduced a new brand of champagne called Her Majesty's, which will attract attention and enlist favor, both by its quality and its price. It is perhaps a little sweeter than some of the other favorite brands, but it is of admirable flavor and cannot fail to be popular. The first thousand cases, (all that have yet been received,) are offered at $20 each.

Successful Union Raid in Virginia.—The Maryland Convention.

Baltimore, Friday, April 15.

The American has a letter from Point Lookout, which says Gen. Hincks, commanding that post, returned on Thursday, from an expedition across the Potomac into Virginia, having captured $50,000 worth of tobacco, on its way from Richmond to Baltimore, and also having taken prisoners a gang of blockade runners.

The American will publish to-morrow, Gen. Brady's Proclamation for the assembling of the State Constitutional Convention, on the 27th instant.

Execution of a Murderer.

Dayton, Ohio, Friday, April 15.

John W. Dobbins, convicted of the murder of Gustav Linkenheim, a year ago, was hung in the county jail to-day.

SAD DISASTER.

Explosion of a Boiler on the Gunboat Chenango.

FORTY PERSONS KILLED AND INJURED.

NAMES OF THE SUFFERERS

Quarantine, S. I., Friday, April 15.

The gunboat Chenango, while outward bound, and off Fort Lafayette, this afternoon, burst her boiler. Forty men on deck were scalded—some of them are dead. (The engine-rooms of the vessel have not been reached yet. The revenue cutter Bronx has come ashore for medical assistance.

FURTHER PARTICULARS.

The United States steam gunboat Chenango, Capt. T. S. Fillebrown, outward bound, and when opposite Fort Hamilton at 4:15 P. M., her port boiler suddenly exploded, blowing up the decks and severely scalding all connected with the Engineers' Department, thirty-three in all. One was blown overboard but subsequently recovered, but badly injured; one has died, and the remainder are in a very critical state; many of them will probably die. The United States revenue cutter Bronx being in the vicinity, immediately repaired to the scene of disaster, and then proceeded to the Quarantine, where she procured a number of physicians and took them on board the Chenango to relieve the sufferers. The United States steam transport Tilley, Capt. Bowers, from Alexandria, while coming up, witnessed the explosion, and immediately went to her assistance, doing a great deal of good; also a small tug which was near at hand rendered all the aid in her power. The Tilley and tug and the cutter Bronx took her in tow and brought her to the Navy-yard. Among those severely scalded are First Asst. Engineer Joseph N. Carnes, (in charge,) Second Asst. Engineer Albert S. Murray, and Second Asst. Engineer Frank P. Root.

The United States steamer Chenango sailed from the City yesterday afternoon for Hampton Roads. The following is a list of her officers:

Lieutenant-Commander, T. S. Fillebrown; Acting Master, Wm. McGlain; Acting Assistant Surgeon, David P. Goodnoe; Acting Assistant Paymaster, Bailey Hassall; Captain's Clerk, A. W. Bellman; Paymaster's Clerk, Rufus Stephens; Surgeon's Steward, Erskine S. Hodge; Paymaster's Steward, John J. Corbin; First Assistant Engineer, Jas. N. Cahill; Second Assistant Engineer, Albert Murray; Acting Second Assistant Engineer, Frank P. Root; Acting Third Assistant Engineer, John White; Acting Third Assistant Engineer, Jas. F. Sullivan; Acting Ensigns, George E. Mott, F. G. Adams, Jas. A. Crossman and Alfred S. Leighton; Acting Master's Mates, D. S. McKenzie, O. E. Goodmanson and F. R. Justabe; Gunner, Heyman Peters; Yeoman, Jas. C. Hansen; Master-at-Arms, F. W. Fuller.

LATER.

At 10 o'clock last evening a dispatch was received at Police headquarters, from the central office in Brooklyn, to the effect that there were about sixty of the crew scalded—over one-half of whom, it is feared, will not survive. Eight or ten had been taken out dead, and several others, it was thought, could not survive through the night. Owing to the difficulty in procuring ambulances, the process of transferring them to the Navy Hospital was necessarily very slow.

The last advices we have state that the engine room and the hold of the steamer had not yet been searched thoroughly, and it was feared that several bodies would be found there, as quite a number of the crew are missing.

The unfortunate men were landed at the Navy-yard last evening, and conveyed to the United States Marine Hospital as speedily as circumstances would admit. All who had arrived up to 10 o'clock were so badly injured as to be unable to give any account of the sad affair.

The ambulance could accommodate but one, and, at most, two at a time, and the process of removal was, therefore, very slow—taking up the greater portion of the night before all reached the hospital.

Some of those residing in Brooklyn, and whose injuries were comparatively slight, were sent to their residences—among them a fireman named Wynne, whose family lives in Water-street.

The Chenango had a crew of about 130 men; was a new vessel, and left the Navy-yard about noon yesterday for the South.

Nothing definite as to the cause of the catastrophe could be obtained, either at the yard or hospital, last night.

THE METROPOLITAN FAIR.

Another Very Successful Day—Receipts from Various Departments—Receipts $29,601 38.

ELEVENTH DAY.

Yesterday was one of the greatest days since the opening of the fair, there was no cessation, no rest. The crowd was as usual, a perfect jam, and the receipts were very satisfactory.

BINGHAMTON LADIES AND THE SANITARY FAIR.

Since our recent notice of Mrs. S. G. Courtney's table in the fair, one the contributions by the ladies of our father's family, we have been courted by her to say that those were by no means the only articles from Binghamton ladies, deserving notice, but among the most inconspicuous; that almost all the ladies of that place furnished articles of tasteful finish and elaborate skill—some of more and some of less intrinsic value, in all amounting to hundreds of dollars. We should take pleasure in giving a list of the articles, with the names of the donors, did space permit. We omitted, in mentioning the names of the young ladies in attendance at this table, to mention Misses Fanny and Mary Connolly, and Miss Miller, as published should have been Miss Muller.

Gen. Grant has received 1,595

The Union-Square Fair Buildings.

THE CHILDREN'S DEPARTMENT.

The usual promenade concert was given last evening in the hall of this department to a numerous and appreciative audience. These concerts are much pleasanter now than during the first week. The seats are removed from the hall, and visitors can enter without extra charge, walk around, listen to the music, or go and return at will.

CONFECTIONARY BOOTH.

Mrs. Foster's stall for the sale of fruits, candies, confectionary, cake, &c., has been well supplied by the confectioners of the City with every variety of sweet things and ornamental designs for parties and suppers. This booth is redundant with sweets, for in consonance with its character the "sweetest girl" in all the Fair is in attendance here. So there is a double attraction; the children go to buy sugar-plums, the gentlemen to look at Miss Calhe, the "fairest of the Fair," who weighs out the sweetmeats with her own dainty little hands.

THE KNICKERBOCKER KITCHEN.

The kitchen was crowded last evening, as it always is. The ladies have their hands full of business, but their pantry is getting empty. The wealthy Dutch families of this City should cater to it that the ladies of the kitchen not only have plenty of customers, but plenty of good things to feed them with. The articles for which there is the greatest demand are meats, poultry, &c., roasted or boiled, which can be cut in cold, and tea, coffee, sugar, ham, tongues, home-made pies, cake, &c. On Monday morning the ladies of the kitchen will need a good supply of these things to carry them through the last week of their enterprise, and New-Yorkers should see that they have what they require.

Gentlemen, Ladies and Invalids of Both Sexes are invited to try the best, old, popular Dentifrice Fragrant "SOZODONT," a composition of the choicest and purest ingredients, the three most important requisites—beautiful, delicious and consistence—being present in the highest possible degree of perfection. It removes all discoloration, scurf and tartaracous adhesions, imparting a pearl-like whiteness to the teeth; gives tone to the church, and a cool, delicate, aromatic fragrance to the breath, which makes it really a toilet luxury.

Sold by Druggists everywhere, at 75 cents per bottle.

Sea-Sickness!
SEA-SICKNESS.
NEW-YORK, April 6, 1864.

Messrs. W. Clifton & Co.:

It affords me great pleasure to add my testimony to the of others, in regards the merits of ROWLEY'S CHINESE STOMACH, manufactured by you. During a recent voyage South, I took with me, by recommendation of a medical friend, several bottles, and not only did it prevent sea-sickness (to which I am very susceptible) in my own case, but a number of my fellow-passengers were in the same manner benefited.

On my return, in the month of January last, being laid up with a severe cold from excess and vomiting throughout voyage. Permit me also to add my testimony to its efficacy as a tonic. I may say that its use has been recommended by many Surgeons in the different departments of the army.

Yours respectfully,
N. G. SHEPHERD,
(late War Correspondent of the Tribune.)

FAIRS.

MARYLAND STATE FAIR
FOR THE BENEFIT OF THE
UNITED STATES SANITARY AND CHRISTIAN COMMISSIONS.

The Maryland State Fair will be opened with appropriate ceremonies, at the Maryland Institute, in the City of Baltimore, on MONDAY, 18th of April, at 8½ P. M., a day ever memorable for the first assault and maltreatment of the soldiers of the sister States of Pennsylvania marching over the common highway of the Republic, to the defence of the Capital of our common country, and the prelude to the atrocities committed in our streets against the patriot sons of Massachusetts on the 19th.

Although her soil has been seared and furrowed by the thread of rebel armies, the daughters of Maryland will not yield to those of any State in placing upon the altar of their beloved country a tribute to the brave defenders of their homes and firesides. Although they may not reach the brilliant results attained in the favored cities of the East and West, valued in money, they will not concede to any a greater degree of devotion to the sublime labor of love exhibited by the agents of the Sanitary Commission, and its no less zealous companion, the Christian Commission, on every battle-field. Not only like the soldier, bleeding and dying in defence of the eternal rights of man to self-government, been assisted and comforted, but the wind of adversity has been tempered to the misguided men who have taken up arms to effect its overthrow.

Contributions in money and goods are earnestly solicited from our merchants, manufacturers, mechanics, farmers and others, and can be addressed to any of the undersigned, or sent to the hall of the Institute, on and after WEDNESDAY, April 13, where they will be received and taken charge of by the Hall Committee.

The various Express Companies will transport articles free of charge.

The programme of the ceremonies of inauguration of the Fair will be announced hereafter.

Tickets of admission to the main hall of the Institute can be had at the following places, on and after WEDNESDAY, April 13, viz.:

Messrs. Cushing & Bailey's, No. 203 W. Baltimore-st.
Messrs. Canfield, Bros. & Co.'s, corner Baltimore and Charles-st.
Mr. James S. Waters, No. 193 W. Baltimore-st.
Messrs. Chas. Reese & Co., corner Madison and Eutaw sts.

Messrs. Armstrong & Berry, No. 186 W. Baltimore-street, and at the Ticket Office of the Institute, on and after 10th April, and at following prices:

Single Tickets—For the first evening	$1.00
Single Tickets—After the first evening	25
Season Tickets—Good for the entire week of the Fair, o'er the first evening	1.00
Season Tickets—Issued to ladies having charge of tables, &c., and their designated assistants only, good for the entire week, including the first evening	1.00

No season tickets are transferable, or allowed to be used except by those to whom issued. Ladies having charge of tables, &c., will please hand in, as soon as practicable, at the store of Messrs. Cushings & Bailey, and addressed to the "Joint Executive Committee," a list of names and the number of tickets desired by them, as above.

There will be an exhibition of rare and valuable Paintings in the Rooms of the School of Design of the Institute, for which season tickets will be issued at the above places for 50 cents; single tickets 25 cents. Other exhibitions, of Tableaux, &c., will be announced, as arrangements are perfected.

Arrangements have been made with the various rail road companies and steamboat lines running into the City, by which tickets will be issued (with admission coupons attached) at greatly reduced rates of fare.

The Public School Commissioners have announced a holiday to the scholars for the afternoons of Thursday and Friday, April 21 and 22.

Articles purchased will not be removed until after the first evening of the Fair, by this feature an opportunity will be offered to all to see the rare and beautiful articles as fast arranged.

A daily newspaper will be published and sold at the Fair.

Meals can be obtained at all hours at the Lunch Rooms, and also at the "New-England Kitchen," which is expected to be one of the most interesting features of the Fair.

The Music for the Fair will be under the direction of Professor Deems.

The Fair will be opened at 10 o'clock on each morning; the Drum Corps will beat the "tattoo" at 10½ P. M.—"taps" at 11, when it is expected that the Rooms will be immediately vacated.

[illegible] of the officers, or, in general [illegible] that should be due and hold a council of war, can never hold one in his life, the opinion of the nine Captains of the nine iron-clads were in harmony with his own that the attack would not be successful. The Admiral complains that his official dispatches have not been published; indulgence is scarcely merited the editor of the Baltimore American and authentic statements of Chief Engineer Stimers.

This letter is replied to by the Secretary on the 15th of May. He says that the press "has been generally kindest and indulgent toward you, and the censures under a great disappointment have been comparatively few."

He then corrects the impressions of Admiral Dupont relative to Mr. Fox, and adds:

"You express your disappointment that your official report is not published. What public benefit, let me ask, could be derived from its publicity? You have received, both from the President and myself, communications expressing upon you to continue to menace Charleston in view of operations in other quarters. It must be obvious to you that a publication of your letters, stating that a purely naval attack on Charleston could not succeed—that you had never advised the measure—representing it as utterly hopeless, could be productive of no public benefit, and would involve yourself, and probably others, in a controversy that would be in every respect injurious.

"I have not published your reports, because, in my judgment, duty to the country forbade it. They may justify the failure at Charleston, and excuse you for not renewing, after a single brief effort, a purpose that the nation had deeply at heart, and for which the Department had, with your concurrence and supposed approval, made the most expensive and formidable preparations ever undertaken in this country; but such publications could have inspired no zeal among loyal men, and would have encouraged those in rebellion.

"It has not appeared to me necessary to your justification that the powers of assault or resistance of our iron-clad vessels should be depreciated, and I regret that there should have been any labored effort for that purpose."

On the 27th of May, Rear Admiral Dupont replies to the letter of the 15th, and after putting himself right relative to the Assistant Secretary, takes exception to the statement that the public press had been generally just toward him. He says there can be no leniency where there has been no offence, and he claims to have done his whole duty, skillfully and faithfully, in the attack upon the defences of Charleston. He dislikes also the terms in which the Department is pleased to comment upon the expression of his regret that the official reports of the attack upon Charleston had not been published, and adds:

"I desire to call the attention of the Department to the statement that I precipitately withdrew from the harbor of Charleston, abandoning the great object for which we had labored so many months. This charge is a serious one, and highly derogatory to my professional character. When I withdrew the iron-clad vessels from action on the evening of the 7th, I did so because I deemed it too late in the day to attempt to force a passage through the obstructions which we had encountered, and I fully intended to renew offensive operations the next day, but when I received the reports of the commanders of the iron-clads, as to the injuries those vessels had sustained, and their performance in action, I was fully convinced that a renewal of the attack could not result in the capture of Charleston, but would, in all probability, end in the destruction of a portion of the iron-clad fleet, and might leave several of them sunk within reach of the enemy. (which opinion, I afterward learned, was fully shared in by all their commanders.) I therefore determined not to renew the attack."

Various other letters and dispatches are published, but the first one of importance is from Admiral Dupont, under date June 2, in which he adverts at some length to the iron-clad operations. We give it entire:

FLAGSHIP WABASH, PORT ROYAL HARBOR, S. C., June 2, 1863.

[Dispatch No. 265—1863.]

Hon. Gideon Welles, Secretary of the Navy, Washington, D. C.:

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of the department's communication of the 14th ult., informing me of the receipt of my several dispatches accompanied by the reports of the commanding officers who participated in the attack upon the forts at Charleston on the 7th of April last.

The tone of this communication is so different from the one which immediately followed it, dated on the 20th ult., and to which I have already replied by the Arago, that I desire to answer it more at length, and to meet the statements of the Department, as contained therein, as fully as may be in my power, and with every mark of consideration due to its distinguished head.

I am well aware, as the department observes, that the results at Charleston were not all that were wished for, and I quite agree with the department that there was, nevertheless, much in them that was gratifying, particularly when the loss of life was so small, and that the capacity of the iron-clads for enduring the hot and heavy fire brought to bear upon them, which would have destroyed any vessels of wood heretofore used in warfare, was made so evident. But I must take leave to remind the department that ability to endure is not a sufficient element wherewith to gain victories, that endurance must be accompanied with a corresponding power to inflict injury upon the enemy; and I will improve the present occasion to repeat the expression of a conviction which I have already conveyed to the department in former letters, that the weakness of the armament of our vessels in this important particular, is fatal to their attempts against fortifications having entrying obstructions, as at the Ogeechee and at Charleston, or against other fortifications upon elevations, as at Fort Darling, or against any modern fortifications before which they must anchor or lie at rest, and receive much more than they can return. With even their diminished surface they are not invulnerable, and their various mechanical contrivances for working their turrets and guns are so liable to immediate derangement that, in the brief though fierce engagement at Charleston, five of eight were disabled, and, as I mentioned in my detailed report to the department, a half or an hour more fighting would, in my judgment, have placed them all hors de combat. The department refers to its order of the 11th April, and to a telegram from the President, which directed the retention of the military forces of the United States near to Charleston, in view of operations elsewhere; and the department states its impression that these dispatches were not in unison with my convictions, and expresses its regret that I should have been pained by their nature, when nothing was farther from the intentions of the President, or of the department, than a design to censure me in these communications.

The letter of the department was unexceptionable, but I certainly did consider the telegram of the President as implying a censure upon myself, and I desire most respectfully to submit, as some evidence that such a belief was not unreasonably entertained by me, that the President, with great kindness, in a second dispatch, and before he could have known what impression his first had made, took occasion to state, much to my gratification, that he had not intended to censure me.

In regard to the subject matter of the order of the department of the 11th of April, and to that of the accompanying telegram, I desire to state here that the order of the department of the 3d of April had been received by me on the 6th, and was so imperative, and so fully expository of the reasons for making it imperative, that I had, as mentioned in my dispatch No. 203, proceeded, on the 13th, at once as was practicable, to Port Royal with the monitors, to put them under repairs before sending them to their new destination. The order of the 11th and the telegram found me here, in compliance with the previous order of April 3.

It was in replying to this telegram, which I then believed to imply a censure upon my action at Charleston, that I deemed it due to myself to state that I had never advised the attack on Charleston and I perceive that the department has taken special exception to the expression, and has dwelt upon it at considerable length in its letter to which I am now replying. A reference to my correspondence with the department, and, more particularly, to my letters to the Assistant Secretary of the Navy, will certainly show that I never advised the attack on Charleston at all, but if made, it should be accompanied by a sufficient number of troops to insure success; and an inspection of this correspondence, which, with the Assistant Secretary was constantly maintained, and which put him, and, as I supposed, the department also, in full possession of my views as to every matter connected with my command, will relieve me, I feel assured, from the imputation that I did not keep the department sufficiently advised of my opinions as to the operations contemplated on this coast; and I beg to refer to the same correspondence as containing all the information obtained by me from every source, in regard to the defences of Charleston; and if, after such information, Charleston harbor continued to be a sealed book to the department, it was equally so to me.

The department, in continuing its remarks upon the want of such information from me, as the Admiral commanding, observes, nevertheless, "that the feasibility and the probable results of the demonstrations that were to be made, had been canvassed and fully considered when I visited Washington last autumn."

The honorable Secretary will remember how very few words passed, on the subject, between him and myself. It was, however, more fully discussed with the Assistant Secretary, who proposed that I should return to my station by way of Hampton Roads, in order that we might further examine the matter; and he accompanied me that far from Washington. But nothing was matured, and for the reason that all was still in the vague future. Not a new iron-clad, except the New Ironsides, was yet finished, and the original Monitor was on the dock in the Washington Navy-yard. The defects of the New Ironsides were glaring, particularly the contracted size of her pilot-house, and its low-deck location behind the enormous smoke-stack, shutting out all view ahead, and most painfully interfering with the management of the vessel in battle—defects painfully realized in the attack on Charleston.

I remember, however, that in our discussion the presidence of the Assistant Secretary in the monitor class of vessels was not pressed so as to lead him to say that not monitor alone, would cause the immediate evacuation of Charleston; upon which occasion, not entertaining such unlimited faith in the powers of those vessels, nor disposed to underrate an enemy, I took the liberty of suggesting that our assault, aided by the Galena and Neosho, both iron-clads, with several wooden gunboats, had failed to take Fort Darling, notwithstanding the great gallantry displayed on that occasion.

The department will therefore perceive that when I left Washington there was really nothing matured, though I was firmly impressed with the fixed determination of the department that Charleston should be attacked, and that, with the iron-clads, that attack must necessarily be successful.

The powers and adaptability of these vessels were as much a sealed book to me as the defences of Charleston to the department; but, under all the circumstances, to wit: the imperfect knowledge of those defences and of the powers of the iron-clads, in which the department had expressed unbounded confidence, no officer would hesitate to make the experiment; and I gave to it my whole heart and energy, not hesitating to ask the department for all the iron-clads that could be spared; and I am happy to say that the department spared no pains to increase the force of those vessels.

While preparations were making and the completion of the monitors was going on, the trials on the Ogeechee took place. As the department is aware, the results here were most discouraging. Two attacks, successively made by one monitor with gunboats and a mortar vessel, had no effect on a fort with seven (7) guns, protected with piling and torpedoes. This was followed by a bombardment of eight (8) hours, with three of the gunboats and three mortar vessels; and, as before, with a like result. The injuries to the monitors were extensive, and their offensive powers found to be feeble in dealing with forts, particularly earthworks.

It may, perhaps, be said that it was my duty to have placed before the department, in more emphatic terms than were used by me, the deductions to be drawn from these preliminary trials, for if three monitors, with gunboats and mortar vessels, following two previous trials on Fort McAllister with one monitor and the wooden boats, had failed to reach or take a seven (7) gun battery, how were eight or nine iron-clads, of all kinds, to capture the defences of Charleston, consisting of continuous lines of works and forts extending for several miles, and mounting some hundreds of guns of improved make, and with a more complicated and more formidable system of obstructions? But, as these were deductions potent on the perusal of my dispatches, I did not deem it necessary to do more than lay all the facts of those trials before the department for its judgment and decision, and in my dispatch No. 41, written as early as Jan. 28, 1863, I expressed myself as follows:

"My own previous impressions of these vessels, frequently expressed to Assistant Secretary Fox, have been confirmed, viz.: that whatever degree of impenetrability they might have, there was no corresponding quality of aggression or destructiveness against forts."

* * * * * *

This experiment also convinces of another impression, firmly held and often expressed, that in all such operations, to secure success, troops are necessary."

These facts, however, seemed not to have changed the views of the department, and, in accordance with its previous orders, and its well-known determination to effect the capture of Charleston, I determined to make the experiment, and to risk, and possibly lose, whatever of prestige pertained to a long and successful professional career, in order to meet the necessities of the Government.

The experiment was made, and, in my opinion, sufficiently thoroughly and conclusively. That it did not succeed in capturing the forts and the City of Charleston is a matter of regret as keen, and of disappointment as great to myself, and to those who shared in it, as can be felt by the department or by the country. It was not, however, without important results, for it established anew the supremacy of artillery in forts, as against floating batteries; and confirmed the truth of the opinions expressed by me in my previous dispatches, that in all such operations, to secure success, troops are necessary.

Had the land forces on this occasion been at all adequate to the emergency, the result might have been all the country desired. With the army in possession of the land approaches to Charleston, the attack upon the sea could have been pushed to desperation, and the sacrifice of some of the iron-clad vessels could then have been properly made, as they would not have fallen into the hands of the enemy. But, unsupported by operations on shore, it would have been a most culpable waste of material upon an unjustifiable forlorn hope to have carried the assault by sea to extremities, with the prospect of leaving a certain proportion of the iron-clads with the enemy, in condition, perhaps, to be raised and repaired by them, and afterward used, from their interior lines, most effectively against the wooden blockaders.

The department expresses disappointment at not receiving from me suggestions in regard to future movements.

I stated to the department in my first report, on the 6th April, that, in my judgment, to renew the attack would be to convert a failure into a disaster, and that Charleston could not be taken by a purely naval attack. In my detailed report of the 15th April, I repeated that it was wholly impracticable to take Charleston with the force under my command.

In making the above declarations without reserve, with a full knowledge of the responsibility involved, and under a high sense of duty, regardless of consequences to myself, I thought that I would, at the same time, be relieving the department of all embarrassment in reference to any immediate movements, and that the department would appreciate my motives in so doing.

I did not, therefore, make any suggestions, but waited to hear from the department in acknowledgment of my reports, and I deeply regret to say that the long and unusual silence maintained by the department has been to me a cause of of very sore disappointment.

Coming out of a battle of so novel a character as to attract the attention of the world, and being the most momentous event in the service of this squadron since its victory in this harbor, the Admiral commanding feels that he had a right to look for ordinary official courtesy, if not for approval. The department has declined to let my countrymen see my official reports, and to this I submit. But the reasons assigned for this course surely did not preclude me from being honored by an acknowledgment of the receipt of my dispatches in the usual course of mail.

For such acknowledgment, however, I waited in vain until six weeks had elapsed after the battle, and I had the mortification of reading European comments upon it before I received a line from the department.

The favorable opportunity for the capture of Charleston presented itself when the gunboats first took possession of Stono Inlet, and the army landed under their protection on James Island, which, at that time, was not strongly fortified. The attack, however, failed, from causes which it is not necessary to mention here, and the opportunity was lost. James Island has been thoroughly protected since that event, and the labor upon the harbor defences has not ceased since the fall of Sumter.

When I stated to the department that, in my opinion, Charleston could not be taken by a purely naval attack, I have wished to be understood in the ordinary acceptation of those terms as used in war, and as conveying the idea of measuring the importance of the operation with its cost. I do not doubt that there is material enough in the country to accomplish this result in time, but, nevertheless, obstructions in the way may be made insuperable, and to take a place it must first be reached.

By a siege, and with the aid of iron-clads armed differently from the present Monitors, whose turrets could be relied upon to continue to turn, at least for a few hours consecutively, and sufficient in number to relieve the disabled ones, the forts can be gradually reduced so as to get at the obstructions, which cannot be removed at night or during daylight by the Monitors while under fire; but the Department will remember how opposed it was to taking Charleston by siege, whether from Morris Island or elsewhere.

The season for joint cooperation is now passing away—as during the Summer James Island is said to be unhealthy for whites to remain upon it. This, though bad for the enemy, would be fatal to our troops. It is probable, taking into consideration the manner in which the forts upon James Island, and that military science would indicate Bull's Bay as the point from which the army should move; this bay was suggested as available for a base operations against Charleston by the board convened by the department in 1861.

If a joint operation on a sufficient scale is not to be undertaken at this moment, I see nothing to recommend now but to endeavor to enforce the blockade of Charleston, which, notwithstanding the presence here of a larger force than I have had before it previously, is still evaded.

The safety of the blockading force must also be looked to, and I respectfully and earnestly appeal to the department to contemplate the condition of the blockade of the whole coast, from North Carolina to Florida. If, as seems probable, it should have to contend with sea-going iron-clads of the enemy, preparing in their own waters and abroad, it is to be greatly feared that the monitors will not be equal to the occasion. They can protect the inside stations, but they are not adapted for ocean work, and iron-clad vessels that can cruise and keep the sea are now absolutely needed. The want of such vessels will be more imperatively felt as the events of this war continue to develop themselves, and I feel myself greatly hampered at this moment because the force under my command, as far as iron-clads are concerned, is composed of vessels whose necessities require them to be kept in smooth water.

But as I have already called the attention of the department to this subject in a special dispatch, I need not dwell any further upon it at present.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,
S. F. DUPONT,
Rear Admiral Commanding
South Atlantic Blockading Squadron.

The following is Secretary WELLES reply to the above:

NAVY DEPARTMENT, June 20, 1863.

Rear-Admiral S. F. Dupont, Commanding S. A. Blockading Squadron, Port Royal, S. C.:

SIR: Your dispatch of the 2d inst., No. 265, was received. Some delay attended the acknowledgment of your official report of the demonstration of the 7th of April, in consequence of my daily expectation of hearing from you in relation to the order of the President. A prompt response on your part to that order would have prevented delay, although your report itself, it should be mentioned, was not received until the 30th of April—a fortnight after the occurrence.

As regards the demonstration of the 7th of April and the circumstances attending it, I do not propose to discuss them, nor would it be reasonable now. I must repeat my regret that your views were not understood by the department before the event took place, for had they been KNOWN matters would have been ordered differently.

When you were here last Autumn and Rear-Admiral DAHLGREN solicited the opportunity of making the attack at Charleston, I was compelled to refuse him, because I supposed what he sought as a privilege, you claimed as a right. In the brief interviews that took place, our conversations respecting Charleston were general, but I never doubted they were frank, cordial and sincere. The duty was confided to you, who had made the subject a study, and had it in hand for more than a year.

With the Assistant Secretary, who has made Charleston a specialty and is familiar with all the points, having, as you are aware, not only visited the place at the commencement of the troubles, but commanded the expedition for the relief of Sumter in the Spring of 1861, you went more fully into particulars, and he, like myself, supposed there was entire coincidence of views on the subject.

It is unfortunate, in every respect, that there was not a more explicit understanding at an early period. If prior to the demonstration of the 7th of April you had not confidence in the monitor vessels and their armament, as the Department understands you have intimated to others, it is to be regretted that you did not make known your distrust of their capability to the department itself before any demonstration was attempted.

Sincerely regretting that any portion of the correspondence which the department has felt compelled to make should have given dissatisfaction or cause you pain, I am, very respectfully,

Your obedient servant,
GIDEON WELLES, Secretary of the Navy.

On the 22d of May the department inclosed an article from the Charleston Mercury stating that the guns of the Keokuk had been removed from the wreck and taken to Charleston, and inquired of Rear admiral DUPONT if he had any information upon the subject. On the 6th of June DUPONT says that he has very little doubt of its truth, and adds that he offered Chief Engineer ROBIE every facility to blow up the Keokuk with ERICSSON'S raft, but that officer found it too dangerous to use. The department replied on the 27th June, concluding its letter as follows:

"The duty of destroying the Keokuk and preventing her guns from falling into the hands of the rebels, devolved upon the Commander-in-Chief rather than on Chief Engineer ROBIE. I do not understand that the operations by the limitations of Mr. ERICSSON'S raft, of which such apprehensions appear to have been entertained. The wreck and its important armament ought not to have been abandoned to the rebels, whose sleepless labors appear to have secured them a valuable prize."

This letter was received on the 5th of July, as Rear Admiral DUPONT was preparing to hand over his command to his successor. He closes a brief reply as follows:

"Having indulged the hope that my command, covering a period of twenty-one months afloat, had not been without results, it was not prepared for a continuance of that censure from the department, which has characterized its letters to me since the monitors failed to take Charleston.

I can only add now, that to an officer of my temperament, whose sole aim has been to do his whole duty, and who has passed through forty-seven years of service without a word of reproof, these censures of the Navy Department would be keenly felt, if I did not know they were wholly undeserved."

A letter from Maj.-Gen. HUNTER to the President is then given, in which HUNTER claims that with the aid of his forces, Charleston would certainly have been reduced, had the assault by the iron-clads been resumed on the second day.

On the 3d June Rear-Admiral DUPONT was notified that he would be relieved of the command of the squadron. On the 4th of June, Gen. GILLMORE, then about ready to sail from New-York, asks that Rear-Admiral DUPONT may be directed to cooperate with him, as it will be fifteen or twenty days before Admiral FOOTE will be ready to sail. On the 6th the department notified DUPONT that Gen. GILLMORE was ordered to the Department of the South, and directed him to afford that officer all the aid and assistance in his power in conducting his operations. The receipt of these instructions was acknowledged under date of June 14. On the 30th June Gen. GILLMORE writes to Gen. HALLECK as follows:

"I have to report no important changes in the condition of things at Folly Island. My preparations are nearly completed, but I can do nothing until DUPONT's successor arrives and gets ready to work. The Admiral has no instructions, and does not feel at liberty to put his vessels into action on the eve of relinquishing his command."

Nothing further of special interest occurs in the correspondence until Oct. 22, 1863, under which date DUPONT submits a vindication of himself. This letter, with the reply of the Secretary, is too long to give entire, and the opening paragraphs from each must suffice. Rear Admiral DUPONT writes to the Secretary:

"Your communication of the 26th June, in reply to my dispatch of the 2d June, was received the day before I left Port Royal.

I had trusted that my communications of the 27th May and 3d June would convince the department of the injustice of its imputations in its dispatches of the 14th and 15th of May. I had confined myself to a detailed, accurate and calm statement of facts known to the department not less than to myself, but of which I supposed it had been betrayed into a momentary forgetfulness by the vexation of disappointment at the failure of the monitors. I was silent respecting its harsh language and unjust reproaches, trusting with confidence that when the facts were recalled to its recollection, the department would retract the wounding words it had written, but which it could never expunge from its records.

In this I have been painfully disappointed. It is with profound regret I perceive in your dispatch of the 26th of June a reiteration of the charges and reproaches of previous dispatches, and in your silence since, during a period of three months, a resolution not to recall them. My last hope of justice at the hands of the department is therefore extinguished.

If I have failed in my duty I am liable to trial, but insulting imputations in official dispatches are grave wrongs, perpetuated on the public records to be my permanent injury.

The remedy which the law would afford me against a superior officer indulging in the language of your dispatches does not exist against the civil head of the department. I can only remark, therefore, for me to place again on the records of the department my indignant refutation of its renewed charges."

The reply of the Secretary is dated Nov. 4, in which he says that he has neither time nor inclination to enter into a controversy about the attack of the 7th of April.

The voluminous report of the Court of Inquiry in the case of Chief Engineer STIMERS; the report relative to the sinking of the Weehawken; a journal of Surgeon MARIUS DUVAL, containing hints relative to the condition of affairs at various times before Charleston, are given, together with various letters relative to the iron-clads, their injuries, repairs needed, improvements, &c., &c.

The fourth and fifth chapters relate to the Western Gulf and Mississippi Squadrons, and contain all the reports from those departments in which iron-clad vessels have been engaged.

The sixth chapter contains the opinions of Rear-Admirals GOLDSBOROUGH, DAHLGREN and POOTER, and Commodore JOHN RODGERS and Brig.-Gen. BARNARD upon the value of iron-clads. These papers are of great value, containing, as they evidently do, the matured opinions and suggestions of these officers. They are too long, however, for the columns of a newspaper. The same chapter also contains many letters from various places on the coast, calling upon the department for iron-clads to protect their harbors, and many other places of interest.

New-York and New-Haven Railroad.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

The attention of the Board of Directors of this popular railroad is earnestly but respectfully solicited, while we plead for a MORNING EXPRESS train to this City, after the plan of the Hudson River Railroad. It seems strange that no such accommodation has ever been given on your road.

Suppose you make the 7 o'clock (Nichols) train from New-Haven an express train, after leaving Norwalk, stopping at Stamford. By the time that train has reached Norwalk, receiving passengers from the New-Haven, West Haven, Milford, Stratford, Bridgeport and the Naugatuck Road, Fairfield, Southport, Westport, Norwalk and the Danbury Road, it has passengers enough, with those it receives at Stamford, to make a train of full size.

Passengers from places below Norwalk can avail themselves of the preceding trains, which pass their stations at convenient hours.

Passengers from the more remote points, such a New-Haven, Waterbury, Bridgeport, Danbury and Norwalk, who are anxious to do a good day's business, and return by an early train, say the 3 o'clock express, will then be greatly expedited, and feel very grateful to the directors.

Therefore, gentlemen, we implore you to give us a Morning Express to the City.

NEWS FROM MEXICO.

The Adhesion of Vidaurri not yet Declared—The French General's Ultimatum—Gen. Ghilardi Shot by Order of a Court-martial—Santa Ana's Departure for St. Thomas—News from St. Domingo—A Negro General in the Spanish service Mortally Wounded, &c.

From Our Own Correspondent.

HAVANA, Saturday, April 9, 1864.

The English steamer Clyde arrived here on the 8th from Vera Cruz, but brings no news of particular importance. DOBLADO's family arrived at Guanajuato on the 17th ult., and that of JUAREZ were likewise expected shortly at Monterey. The reason of the coming of DOBLADO's family to a place in the power of his enemies is not mentioned, but the Franco-Mexican papers take occasion to vaunt the magnanimity of the new order of things, when even its most bitter opponents can place such reliance in its power and good faith.

President JUAREZ, taking into consideration the general wish of the inhabitants of Coahuila, has declared that State independent of New-Leon, the latter being declared under martial law. The interventionists insist that the inhabitants of Piedras Negras, and the neighboring districts, have protested against the separating of the above-named States.

The Franco-Mexican paper, the Estafette, says that the corps d'armée of 5,000 or 6,000 men, stationed in the State of Michoacan, under the command of Gens. URAGA, TERPIN and ORTEGA, and another corps d'armée of 5,000 men collected by Gen. PORFIRIO DIAZ, in the State of Oajaca, are nearly all the regular forces that JUAREZ' party can dispose of. The Siglo, of this city, says that adding to the above the vast quantity of guerrillas that swarm throughout the country, it may well be asked whether the whole country is in favor of the new form of government? According to the above-named paper, JUAREZ and DOBLADO are still in New-Leon, but up to the present have not come to blows with the Governor of the State, VIDAURRI. PATONI, Governor of Durango, was expected to join them at the end of last month, with 1,500 men and twenty pieces of artillery. Among the guerrillas that still are in the field, the most important party is that which has just assembled at Piedra Gorda, and who have received orders to unite with DOMADO, which the Estafette considers will not be easily effected.

To put an end to the difficulties in the State of New-Leon, Gen. BAZAINE has sent his ultimatum to VIDAURRI, which is a formal declaration of adhesion to the Empire; he is preparing, say the Franco-Mexican papers, to invade the State if VIDAURRI should refuse. According to the last news from Vera Cruz, dated the 31st ult., VIDAURRI must by that time have acknowledged the Empire. We are informed from the same source that JUAREZ continued at Saltillo with DOBLADO.

Gen. GHILARDI, an Italian, was condemned to death by a French Court-martial, and shot at Aquas-Calientes, on the 17th ult.

ALMONTE and his lady were expected at Vera Cruz to receive the Emperor MAXIMILIAN. The steamer Elizabeth, which was to bring over the Archduke, was expected at Vera Cruz at the end of this month. It was supposed there that it would touch at this port, (Havana,) on its way, but nothing is known here of such a thing being likely to occur. The military operations of both parties appear at present to be directed to the State of Oajaca, and the plan of campaign proposed to be carried on by the Liberals in that direction is acknowledged even by their opponents to be of great merit, but its execution they deny to be possible when the State of Oajaca shall have been occupied by the Franco-Mexican forces. The Restoto of the 26th ult., published in the Capital, contains the following remarks upon this subject, a publication which it is needless to remark, is written expressly for the Government use:

"For some days past the enemy, who find no rest in the interior, and who, toward the north, meet with obstacles in the rebellions of Monterey and Matamoras, or with the cold indifference of Durango, Chihuahua, Sonora and Sinaloa, appear to have concentrated the remains of their vitality in the State of Oajaca, making it the base of operations with respect to Chiapas and Tabasco, and of which they have regained almost the entire possession, communicating toward the west with the State of Guerrero, the south of Michoacan and Jalisco and the Territory of Colima. The plan is vast and its execution would be fruitful in good results for the enemy, if the occupation of the State of Oajaca, which the Franco-Mexican forces will not be long in effecting, did not cut up their centre and right wing, consisting of Chiapas and Tabasco, which will remain isolated and return immediately to order; and if the blockade of Acapulco and the advance of the conservative forces by the south of the departments of Mexico and Puebla, would not finish with the State of Guerrero. However it may be, in the line that we have attempted to trace, and which recognizes as its base Oajaca, the enemy have obtained advantages and assembled elements of which we must speak, and so much the more because the result of the campaign, which is about to be undertaken, will make evident the usefulness of all the efforts that JUAREZ' party may make to prolong even for some months his dominion in a few districts."

Chiapas and Tabasco having been taken by the Liberals, and Minatitlan evacuated by the French, it is acknowledged by the Interventionists that the District of Tehuantepec is in a doubtful position between the above-named States and Oajaca. In Oajaca there are assembled 5,000 prepared to wait the Franco-Mexican army.

A short time ago the headquarters of the Juarist General, DIAZ, were at Nochistlan, a town of Mixtecs Alta, his forces being stationed at that place, as well as at Huajuapam, Yanhuitlan and Teotitlan, twelve leagues from Tehuacan, his intention being apparently to act on the offensive against the State of Puebla. But at the last accounts the greater part of these forces had been concentrated in the City of Oajaca, and DIAZ was fortifying the neighboring highland. The Interventionists boast that the State of Yucatan is remaining tranquil in their cause, and Government after the French model is being organized there, the State being divided into five departments, Merida, Campeachy, Valladolid, Izamal and Tekuz. Isla del Carmen and Yucatan are in DIAZ's right wing, and the Liberals of the State of Guerrero are on his left, but the interventionists say that their efforts are directed only to the issuing of proclamations. The Juarist forces of PRESON and JUAREZ, according to the Franco-Mexican accounts, were concentrated at Tixtla, and were preparing to continue their retreat toward the coast.

The accounts from Vera Cruz make no mention of Guadalajara, which would almost make it appear that URAGA had really retaken that city, but the newspaper PAZ, of Leon, mentions in an article that it was reported that a French force had left Guadalajara for the purpose of fighting URAGA, who had fixed his base of operations at Ateququipe. It was believed in Michoacan that URAGA, on retiring from the neighborhood of Guadalajara, would invade that State, or, as it is called by the new order of things, department. MARQUEZ division had been, therefore, moved from Morelia to Zamora for the purpose of preventing their entrance. The Franco-Mexican papers say that the Juarist guerrillas have caused disastrous depredations in Parepero, Patzcuaro and other places, which could not defend themselves from want of arms.

The Vera Cruz papers are congratulating themselves that the pacification of the eastern part of the Tierra Caliente is nearly complete, a visible change having taken place among the inhabitants of the coast, who encouraged the guerrillas to make incursions in that direction, by which means the progress of the railroad works was materially impeded. In the act of adhesion of the town of Paso de Orejas, which was about to be transmitted to the Capital, there were subscribed the names of many of the leaders of the ex-guerrilla corps that figured in the above-named district. The occupation of Tuspan by the Imperialists, will open, say the Vera Cruz papers, an exit for the trade of Huastecas and increase it. The Franco-Mexican paper, the Semidel, says that the railroad works from Puebla toward Orizaba would shortly commence, the merchants and property-owners of Puebla having taken a large number of shares. The Government have ordered the proprietors of houses in the Capital to renovate the exteriors, a measure which it is calculated will cost the owners about $300,000, and therefore give as much more employment to the laboring classes.

Gen. SANTA ANA left here in the Clyde, for St. Thomas, where he intends to remain until the arrival of the Emperor MAXIMILIAN in Mexico.

Recent news from Tenerife, in the Canaries, mentions that the Confederate steamer Florida put into that port, but left the next day. She carried 11 guns, and had a crew of about 120 men.

The last accounts received from St. Domingo mention that an engagement took place between the Spanish troops and the insurgents, at a place called Paso del Muerto, near Guerra, in which, it is said, that Suzac, a General in the Spanish service, was mortally wounded, having died the same night after the battle.

Suzac was a negro, a native of St. Domingo, and held a high reputation for his courage. He was a Mariscal de Campo in the Spanish service, a grade equal to that of the French General of Division, and considered very loyal. The Spaniards have another negro General in their service named FUZILIA.

Military preparations are being actively carried on, and troops assembling at Santiago de Cuba, for an expedition against some point in San Domingo, most probably Monte Cristo. It is generally reported that it will be commanded by Gen. DULCE, but how far this is a fact I will not undertake to say.

No. 44 EXCHANGE-PLACE,
NEW-YORK, April 15, 1864.

In calling the attention of our friends and correspondents to the Pacific Quicksilver Mining Company, we beg to add the following notices, which is furnished to us from reliable sources:

The property of the Pacific Quicksilver Mining Company comprises the Cinnabar Claims of twenty small companies consolidated. The claims thus united, cover over three continuous miles in length of the Mammoth Lodge, in Napa County, California, about seventy miles north of San Francisco. The richness of the Cinnabar is proved by the assay of Prof. Kent, of the United States Assay Office; a specimen assayed by him yielded 65 9-10 per cent. of quicksilver. The quicksilver mines of the world are limited, the principal supply thus far having been drawn from those of Almaden, in Spain. Prior to the discovery of the Mammoth mine, in California, the mines of the Pacific Quicksilver Mining Company give promise of richness equal to the best of those, and worked with ample capital, of equal success. The want of capital has alone prevented their earlier development.

Of the great and increasing demand for Quicksilver, it is a supererogatory to speak; per of the large returns made by the two known mines of Cinnabar.

Every new mine, of gold or silver, creates an increased demand; and the small cost of this great property, free from incumbrance, on the terms offered, viz., only $100,000, for the property, with $400,000 in cash on hand, pledges it to a large return.

A number of specimens taken by John T. Howard, Esq., of Brooklyn, from various parts of the ledge, can be seen at our office.

Very respectfully,
SYMMON, FRONK & CO.

MORSE & CO.,
No. 24 William-st., New-York.

APRIL 5, 1864.

NEW-YORK, April 4, 1864.

I visited this Mine in the month of December, 1863, accompanied by Guido Kustel, the most distinguished Metallurgist and Mining Engineer on the Pacific coast, for many years the Manager of the Ophir Works, and author of a valuable treatise on the "Processes of Silver and Gold Extraction," recently published in California. My opinion of the value and quality of this Mine is based on information derived from this gentleman, and on my own observations at the Mine.

The Mine is situated in Arizona, about three miles north of the northern boundary line of Sonora, and five miles distant from the celebrated Mowry Silver Mines; it is accessible at all seasons of the year, either by the way of Los Angeles, Liberty, or Guaymas. But little work has been done in developing the mine; enough, however, to discover the width and extent of the lode and determine the quality and value of the ores.

Where the shaft is sunk the vein is from four to six feet wide between lime-rock and garnet, running east and west, and exhibits galena or sulphuret of lead, carbonate of lead, zinc-blende, copper-pyrites; the richest is the sulphuret of lead, assaying one hundred and fifty-five dollars per ton; the vein has been prospected about half a mile. Mr. Kustel, in a letter addressed to the San Francisco owners, says: "The San Antonio lode appears, where the shaft is sunk, a good wide vein of ore, easy to reduce by fire, and will pay on an average, according to the proportions of the different metals, from seventy to ninety dollars per ton."

I believe there is an abundant supply of this ore, and that by an expenditure of a comparatively small sum of money, the mine can be put in a condition to produce 40 tons per day; if this ore averages only $60 per ton, the gross product of the mine would exceed $2,000 per day; the entire cost of mining and reducing a ton of this ore will not exceed twenty dollars.

On the premises, about 200 yards from San Antonio lode, in a N. E. direction, there is a very rich copper lode, six feet wide; the ores which we obtained from this lode, considered a fair average, assayed 30 p. cent. of copper and 276 in silver. Miners can be obtained in any number in the immediate vicinity, at about $10 p. month.

The reduction works of the mine are three miles distant from the mine, consisting of a small engine and two furnaces. There is an abundance of wood and water for all purposes on the property.

I consider the San Antonio very valuable Silver Mine, if worked with skill and energy, it will produce most satisfactory results.
